Automation Proves Rakes on Way Out

Litter Getter, physical plant's newest automation addition, has made the rake virtually obsolete.

Litter Getter and its smaller brother, Little Shark, have been scooting about the past few days clearing the campus of everything from autumn leaves to day-old Froths.

Although paper cups, milk cartons, tin cans, pop bottles and Daily Collegians have been emptied from the $2800 machine, Litter Getter's specialty is, of course, leaves.

Its powerful gasoline-operated vacuum pump pulls in the leaves—Litter Getter can hold about 20 cubic yards compressed to about 6 cubic yards—and grinds and pulverizes them.

Walter W. Trainer, head of the Division of Landscape, is proud of the three machines—the third is used permanently on Beaver Field—which can easily do the work of a half-dozen men. They not only save labor, Trainer said, but can do the job faster and more efficiently and will pay for themselves in a year.

By-benefits, just as important, include the machine's ability to shred the leaves before they are put in composte piles by the division. This means the leaves will decompose in two or three years, where it previously took five.

There'll be fewer cluttered gutters, too, Trainer said, with a resulting lessening of drain clogging.

The smaller machines — the Litter Sharks — cost considerably less than the Litter Getter, about $260 each.

The one at Beaver Field was wheeled about after Saturday's Marquette-Penn State football game to clear up the hundreds of pounds of paper and other trash left by the fast-exiting spectators.

I'LL ADMIT IT!

Homecoming Queen—Jody Miller

Yes! I'll admit — Charles made me feel like a queen when he asked me to model this lovely green satin dancing dress.

Mr. Charles suggests that you come and see his large collection of Junior Prom dresses starting at $29.95.
