Faculty Art Shows Variety of Technique

"Something to interest everyone" seems to be the unwritten theme of the 1958 faculty art exhibit which is now on display on the main floor of the Hetzel Union Building. The exhibit was put together to show what members of the departments of arts, architecture, art education and theatre arts are doing.

This year they are doing everything from impressionistic oils to mosaic tables. Pictures reminiscent of the days Jackson Pollack's controversial "Garcia" was displayed in the HUB gallery stand side by side with modern furniture and "old fashioned" water colors. Examples of oil paintings, both realistic and impressionistic, water colors, mosaics, pen and ink sketches, colored pencil sketches, jewelry design, costume and set design, stoneware pottery and cassein are all on display.

Faculty members exhibiting works in the exhibit are: Milton S. Osborne, head of the Department of Architecture; Kenneth R. Beittel, associate professor of art education; Edward L. Mattil, associate professor of art education.

James A. Schinneller, assistant professor of art education; Yar Chomicky, associate professor of art education; Elizabeth Yeager, assistant professor of art education.

Samuel C. Sabeau, associate professor of art; Leon Frankston, instructor in art education; Bill Hanson, instructor in art; Andrew W. Case, professor of art; Stuart H. Frost, instructor in art; George Pappas, assistant professor of art and art education; John Y. Roy, assistant professor of art. Bruce Shobaken, instructor in art; George S. Zoretich, associate professor of art; Eleanor Zygler, assistant professor of art; Edwin W. Zeller, professor of art; and Russell G. Whaley, assistant professor of theatre arts.

Acacia Wins 1st Prize In Motorcade

(Continued from page one) mentary education from Harrisburg, was pulling one of Delta Tau Delta's cars with a string. He claimed it was a "1958 Tanker Toy" car. It carried a sign proudly proclaiming "I am not a sports car"; and it was no longer than 9 inches.

Decorated scooters and bikes which were ineligible for prizes also rode in the parade and added to the "football spirit on wheels."

At the pep rally after the motorcade Vince Marino, junior class president, presented the trophy to Charles King of Acacia.

J. T. White, end coach, was the main speaker at the rally. He said he was "sure the team will do a good job."

Peter Elder, freshman in labor management relations from Havertown, and Samuel Crause, freshman in business administration from Havertown, put on a skit at the rally. They portrayed Boston University's coach and his star quarterback.

The "coach," who seemed exasperated with the team, introduced his "quarterback" to the crowd. This star player coughed and smoked his way through the interview.

The sponsoring hat societies were Androcles, junior men, and Chimes, junior women.

Bourguiba said, in effect, that from his experience he had found that Tunisia could not do business with the U.A.R. so long as Nasser is in control.

By aligning himself with the West, Bourguiba said, he was serving the cause of his people and even of the Nationalists in neighboring Algeria, who have been fighting France for independence.

His break with Egypt was perhaps only the expectable outgrowth of what Bourguiba believes is Egypt's determination to unseat him.

Bell Dies in N.Y. Of Heart Attack

(Continued from page one) business for the Penn State Press. He was with two graduates of the University, Robert Lane and Thomas Lyon, employees of a New York City advertising firm, when he died.

Mr. Bell was off the job for eight months after suffering a severe heart attack in 1949. He was reported in relatively good health until this spring, when Dr. John H. Light, State College physician, advised him to retire as director of Public Information. His duties are being shared by three University officials.

A native of Chester, Mr. Bell worked on newspapers there and in other parts of the state following graduation. He returned to the University in 1934 as an instructor in journalism.

He gave up teaching in 1941 to take over campus promotion and publicity for the Engineering, Science, Management War Training Program. He held that post until he became director of Public Information on July 1, 1943.

For many years Mr. Bell was adviser to The Collegian and Froth and served as a member of the board of directors of Collegian, Inc., the newspaper's publisher.

As an undergraduate, he was a member of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity; Lion's Paw, senior men's society, and Skull and Bones, senior men's hat society.

Surviving are his wife, Catherine, 538 E. Hamilton Ave., and four children, Michael, 21, a senior at Harvard University; Cristina, 19, a sophomore at Penn State; Cathy, 16, and Betsy, 12. Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

Terriers Boast Heavy Line Corps

(Continued from page six) O'Connell, Jim Courville and Jon Izzo. Canero, a junior, was second only to Maio last fall as BU's top offensive threat. But he has not lived up to Sinko's expectations this fall. He set an eight-game sophomore rushing record last year with 388 yards, 4.7 yards per carry. He also specializes on kickoff returns, averaging 30 per return in 1957, including a 95-yard ramble against Holy Cross.

"They also have good ends and a very quick and agile interior line," White said of the Terrier forward wall. "One tackle, (Jim) DiBona, weighs 260 pounds and he can move. Jim Kenney and Phil Kearney are the ends and they are good receivers and blockers. That Kenney is one of the co-captains and he does all the kicking-punts, kickoffs and extra points."

Sinko employs the alternate unit system that is familiarly associated with Penn State's Coach Rip Engle. And according to publicity reports from Beantown, the second line has played just as good as the first team line this season.

That first team front wall, which averages 220, includes Kearney and Kenney at the ends, DiBona and Paul Manganaro at the tackles, Hal McAvoy and Tom Caito at the guards and Chuck Wanosky at center. The second line averages 207 and has Gene Perbola and Pat McCue at the ends, Paul Rowles and Jo McCann at the tackles, Len Pare and Steve McGowan at the guards and Bob Marques at center.
