

Players' Production To Open Thursday

By JEANETTE SAXE

A variety of things including politics, polite burglary, art, artificiality, microbes and eternity will be portrayed in the Players' production of George Bernard Shaw's comedy, "Too True To Be Good" to be presented at 8 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday in Schwab Auditorium.

The show is about the virtues of lying, the artifices of love, the foolishness of mothers, the inconsistencies of religion, the joys of Army life and the sorrows of being rich.

As were most of Shaw's other plays, "Too True To Be Good" was used as a forum for his ideas, theories and ideologies of society.

The purpose of Shaw's comedy was the illumination of life—exposure of fatuous complacency, ridicule of Victorian pharisaism and reduction to absurdity of conventional manners and morals.

In "Too True To Be Good," Shaw used the baldest elements of farce-melodrama to present a view of humanity which, in all its absurdity, is a sharply definitive criticism of our species. Each person in the play represents a certain type of person in our society. Shaw tries to have us see ourselves in them.

The cast will be headed by Mary Minkewich as Sweetie, the ex-chambermaid; Ivan Ladizinsky as Aubrey Baggot, the gentleman burglar; and Pat Thompson as Miss Moppley, the invalid. Ladizinsky will also appear as a Bible-reading sergeant.

Others in the cast will be Len Tarnowski as Private Meek and the monster; Marta Harrison as Mrs. Moppley; and Ellis Grove as the doctor, Colonel Tallboys, and the Elder.

Warren Smith, associate professor of theatre arts, will direct the play. He has devised a method of staging the show, which is a combination of a regularly staged production and a drama quartet reading, to emphasize both the comic and serious portions. The unusual nature of the staging requires some members of the cast to portray more than one role.

Lucas scored the Lions' final TD in the third period as the climax to a 65-yard drive. Three passes by Lucas—two to Jim Kerr for 18 yards and another to Maury Schleicher for six—featured the drive. Lucas also scored the extra points on a two-yard keeper.

IFC Votes--

The council approved a motion made by Eugene Brosius, Tau Kappa Epsilon, requesting the compiling and codification of IFC and University regulations concerning the fraternity system into a president's booklet.

Hintz appointed Brosius chairman of the committee to compile the booklet and named Ronald Siders, Allan Weisenfluh, Edward Kormos, Ralph Moore and James McGurk to the committee. The booklet will list University social rules and housing regulations in addition to all IFC rushing, pledging and social function rules.
