

Dilworth to Ask Fair Housing Act

Philadelphia Mayor Richardson Dilworth plans to promote state legislation next year to stop racial discrimination in housing—especially in suburban areas.

Dilworth expressed a hope that the 1959 session of the General Assembly will approve such legislation or that a similar program will be enacted by the federal government.

Dilworth Discusses Girard Case

The justices of the State Supreme Court expected the U.S. Supreme Court to overrule their decision in the Girard College case, according to Philadelphia Mayor Richardson Dilworth.

Both courts refused to take action to permit enrollment of Negroes in the orphans' school, which receives tax write-offs. Negroes were barred by the will of Stephen Girard, 18th century Philadelphia philanthropist.

"I will never understand the opinion of the U.S. Supreme Court," Dilworth said Monday. "I think it's going to rise to haunt the justices in the Little Rock case."

He said the Girard will has already been broken in numerous ways in efforts to keep up with the times.

Dilworth also said he foresees no future efforts in the case by city officials, who had instituted the proceedings.

The question came up at a student discussion Monday in a Hetzel Union dining room. Dilworth said he learned that the state court justices expected a reversal in a private discussion with one of them.

A marathon among campus organizations was suggested at the Education Student Council meeting last night as a method of raising money for the Larry Sharp Fund.

The council was informed that $30,000 has been spent on Larry Sharp's hospitalization.

Other suggestions to raise money included a concentrated week of fund raising, door-to-door solicitation among students or a dance or major activity to make money for the fund.

The elections committee of the council reported that council nominations for freshman positions were now being accepted and elections will be next Tuesday and Wednesday.

A screening committee will consider all applicants this Sunday.

Committee reports were also given on the progress of the council's children's book collection, the coming issue of Monitor, education student newspaper, and plans for an open house to be held for students at the centers who will be coming to the campus next year.

But, according to Dilworth, Negroes find it almost impossible to get housing in areas outside city limits, especially in suburbs, which have "built up sort of a white noose around the city."

The Philadelphia mayor on Sunday night delivered the keynote address of the conference on "Integration in the North" sponsored by the Committee on Interreligious Affairs. He spoke to classes, student groups and the Faculty Luncheon Club on Monday.

Dilworth also called for an individual approach to facilitate an end to racial discrimination.

"I think we're going to have to do an awful lot more doing unto others as we would be done by," he said.

The mayor described private industry and labor unions as other channels through which to fight discrimination. In these areas, he said, "It's time to let the barriers down—barriers that to my way of thinking are as un-American as you can be."

Up until about two years ago, Dilworth said, Negro and white leaders could get together and work out many of the racial problems that confronted Philadelphia.

But he described this method as being not as applicable now because of a "hardening of attitudes," caused partly by increased nation-wide racial conflict.

Dilworth put part of the blame on this nation-wide conflict for sending thousands of Negro migrants into the big cities. Most of them are from the South and are ill-prepared for big-city life, he said, but "99 and 99-100ths per cent want to work and want to work hard."

Forty-four representatives from eight Pennsylvania colleges, including the University, attended the Intercollegiate Association of Women Students (IAWS) statewide meet held here Saturday.

The meet, designed to acquaint non-member schools with IAWS and to share ideas of student government, was a great success according to Jessie Janjigian and Nancy Clark, co-chairmen for the meeting.

"A great number of ideas are shared. When students get together with other students who have the same interests, much inspiration can come out of such a meeting and it is carried back to their respective student governments," Misses Clark and Janjigian said.

Delegates at the meet represented Albright, Immaculata, Gettysburg and Alliance Colleges, the University of Pittsburgh, Drexel Institute of Technology and Slippery Rock State Teachers College.

The meet was comprised of four workshops, each with a student leader and a consultant in charge. These workshops concerned problems of student government common to all colleges. Each student leader helped the group get acquainted and established the groundwork for the discussion. The consultant supplied information when it seemed pertinent to the discussion.

The first workshop, "Religion on a College Campus," was led by Lynn Ward with Dr. Luther Harshbarger as consultant. Problems discussed were how religion should fit into a woman's life and should student government aim to establish moral standards.

Helen Skade led the workshop on "Standards of Conduct" with Miss Christine Taylor of the dean of women's office at the University of Pittsburgh as the consultant. The workshop discussed how student government can demand standards of conduct from the students.

A workshop on "Discovering and Developing the Student" was led by Mary Ann Gemmill. Miss Nancy White, also of the dean of women's office at the University of Pittsburgh served as consultant.

The last workshop, on the "Multiple Roles of Women Today" was conducted by Susan Whittington, Sandra Gotsky and Rita Natale, IAWS coordinator from the University of Pittsburgh. Miss Mary Jane Wyland, Mrs. Peggy Shafer and Miss R. Christine Yohe were the consultants.

Eng Council Will Discuss Career Show

The Engineering and Architecture Student Council will discuss freshman-sophomore elections and plans for a career exposition at 7 tonight in 215 Hetzel Union.

Jack Kendall, council president, said freshmen and sophomores may pick up self-nomination blanks for the council on engineering bulletin boards and at the HUB desk today through Saturday. The blanks must be returned by 12 noon Saturday to 204 Sackett.

Freshmen will elect council members during the engineering lecture on Oct. 28. Ballot boxes for sophomores will be in the HUB cardroom and Engineering B, Oct. 28 and 29.

Kendall said the council is considering a career exposition instead of the industrial exposition held last year.

The career exposition would feature product displays similar to the industrial exposition, he said, but men from the various companies would also discuss engineering career opportunities.

how wide-spread the knowledge was.

Thompson, trying to protect his boastful friend, declined to reveal his name.

"Well, tell it to me, or tell it to the Secret Service," the Bell representative ultimatumed.

Thompson told him the friend's name.

It was important to know how many knew the number in order to see whether it was necessary to change it and then go through the lengthy process of informing all those government officials and diplomats.

The Secret Service, evidently satisfied that knowledge is not very wide-spread, called off its investigation at the beginning of the week. And they needn't worry about Thompson anymore, who said:

"Me? I've forgotten the number."

1957 Encampment: The Results

Cabinet to Start Reorganization Study

By DENNY MALICK
Eleventh of a Series

All-University Cabinet will appoint a committee tomorrow night to continue the study on student government reorganization.

All-University President Jay Feldstein said he expects the committee to finish its study by the middle of next semester so the revised setup can be used next fall.

One of the jobs of the committee will be to bring the Cabinet constitution up to date.

Daniel Thalmer, Cabinet parliamentarian, was selected by Feldstein to head the committee.

The Cabinet reorganization was one of the main goals of the student government workshop of the 1957 Student Encampment.

Encampment suggested a 3-fold way of selecting Cabinet members:

- University-wide affiliation, as the All-University officers and presidents of the four classes.
- College affiliation with presidents of each college council.
- Living unit affiliation including presidents of the Association of Independent Men, Town Independent Men, Interfraternity Council, Womens Student Government Association, Panhellenic Council and Leonides.

Under this plan, four present Cabinet members would be dropped and a new one added. Those suggested to be dropped are The Daily Collegian editor and presidents of the Womens Recreation Association, Athletic Association, and Board of Dramatics and Forensics. Town Independent Men president would be the new representative.

A part of the student government workshop's recommendations was the integration of the Division of Counseling into student government, now a move being considered.

Joyce Jacobs of the public relations department of Bell Telephone Company spoke to the delegates at a luncheon in the Hetzel Union Building. Miss Jacobs gave biographies with added interesting sidelights of famous women of Pennsylvania.

When asked if the meet served its purpose in getting other colleges interested in IAWS, the co-chairmen of the meeting said that a number of the representatives expressed interest in the group.
