

Syracuse Tops Nation In Scoring Department

If statistics are any indication of team worth, then Syracuse's football team must be worth plenty.

In fact, they are the country's best in the scoring category with 32.5 points average per game. That's a total of 130 markers in four encounters—not bad for a month's work.

Individually-wise, senior left halfback Tom Stephens leads the Syracuse outfit in scoring with 22 points on three TDs and two PATs, followed by Ernie Jackson and Dick Reimer who are tied with 14 points each. Incidentally, Stephens was the Warrior scoring pacer last fall with 7 touchdowns for 42 points.

Offensively, Coach Ben Swartzwalder's upstate New Yorkers are ninth in total offense with 354.8 yards per game and 10th in rushing with a 257.5 game average.

However, Penn State tops that ground-gaining mark by almost 20 yards more per game. The Lions, whose only bad game, statistically speaking, was against first-ranked Army, are third in the nation's offensive rushing division with a 276.2 average—2.3 less than Atlantic Coast Conference leader Clemson. Colorado leads the ground-gaining with a whopping 353.2 average.

The Lions are also listed in the total offense ledger with an average of 333.8 yards a game—good enough for a tie with New Mexico for 13th place.

But back to Syracuse. The

Tom Stephens ... Syracuse's scoring leader

Orangemen are rated 10th in total defense and fifth in rushing defense. They have given up 733 yards (183.9 per game) rushing and passing and only 295 (73.8 average) on the ground.

Ironically, the Warriors have named a man listed with the country's individual offensive leaders. Their top rusher, Gerry Schwedes, has gained only 160 net yards—far below the 334 yards recorded by the 15th-ranked ground gainer, Pete Hart of Hardin-Simmons.

And Chuck Zimmerman, Syracuse's best passer, trails 16th place Charlie Milstead of Texas A&M among the country's top aerial standouts by 115 yards. Milstead has gained 382 yards to Zimmerman's 267. However, the Syracuse senior is one of the best TD flingers with four—second only to Navy's Joe Tranchini (7) and Washington State's Bobby Newman (6).

There's another statistic where the Orangemen rate high and that's punting. They are in eighth place with a 39.4 average on 21 booms. Southern Methodist, the leader in that department, has a 41.3 average in 13 kicks.

Despite this average, the Orange still fail to place a man in the individual punting statistics—but only because of a slight technicality. Ed Keiffer has booted 10 times for a 41.2 average and Tom Gilburg has kicked the same number for a 40.5 average—but 12 punts are needed to qualify for a spot with the punting leaders.
