

Chiang Rules Out Force as Means Of Return to China

TAIPEI (AP) — Chiang Kai-shek ruled out force yesterday as the main means of returning to the China mainland and reportedly agreed to trim his offshore garrisons slightly.

Chiang's renunciation of force was announced in a communique at the windup of the three days of talks with Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.

The communique said nothing specifically about a troop reduction, but a competent authority said Chiang and Dulles had come to broad agreement on it.

This source said this was the plan:

The Nationalist offshore garrisons would be cut by 15,000 to 20,000 from the 100,000 reported there now. These garrisons then would be streamlined with modern weapons for defense.

No time for the start of troop cuts was set. It would depend partly on whether the Communists relieved pressure on the islands. It would be scheduled so as to give no appearance of yielding to Red threats and would be coordinated with the arrival of modern weapons.

The communique emphasized that it is the sacred mission of Nationalist China to return to the mainland, but added: "The foundation of this mission resides in the minds and hearts of the Chinese People."

The communique went a step closer to a U.S. commitment to defend the offshore islands. It said that the United States and the Nationalist regime "recognized that under present conditions the defense of the Quemoy Islands together with the Matsus is closely related to the defense of Taiwan (Formosa) and Penghu (the Pescadore) islands in Formosa Strait."

It added that the Chinese Communists and the Russians "cannot possibly succeed" in trying to conquer Formosa, eliminate Nationalist China and expel the United States from the western Pacific.

It added that the principal ways to recover the mainland are through nationalism, democracy and social well-being, "not the use of force."

It was understood that Dulles considered this statement extremely important in removing fears in the west that the Nationalists are bent on war.

Coed Leaves Dorm, Back In Morning

A McElwain coed who left her residence hall after hours Wednesday and stayed out overnight, returned yesterday.

Dean of Women Pearl O. Weston would not reveal the girl's name. She said a member of the girl's family had been contacted. Women's Judicial will hear the case, Miss Weston said.

A campus patrolman saw the coed run from a side door of McElwain about 11:30 p.m. Wednesday. He said she got into a car driven by a man.

Col. Lucien E. Bolduc, head of campus patrol, said the patrolman was not certain whether one or two girls ran from the dormitory.

The incident was reported immediately to McElwain hostesses, who made a bed check throughout the building. Only one coed was found missing.

Bolduc said the patrolman could not identify the coed. But he did note the car's license number, Bolduc said.

Weatherman Says 'Cloudy, Humid'

By Joel Myers
Collegian Forecaster

Today's weather is expected to be mostly cloudy and humid with a chance of a few showers. The high is expected to be 70 degrees.

The prediction for the weekend is partly cloudy and continued mild for Saturday, with a high expected to be 71 degrees. Sunday's outlook is partly cloudy and cooler.

HUB Board Asks Later 'Den' Hours

By ELAINE MIELE

The Hetzel Union Board will ask the University to extend permanently the Lion's Den hours on weekends.

The board will forward to Dr. Ossian R. MacKenzie, vice president for business administration, a request that the snack bar service be extended to midnight and the Lion's Den doors be kept open until 12:15 every Friday and Saturday night.

Louis A. Berrana, manager of Food Service, said that Food Service suffered a loss during the two weekends earlier this month that the Lion's Den was kept open until 12:30 as an experiment.

About 300 students were served each night during the trial weekends and a total loss of $46.32 was suffered.

There will be a greater loss if the Lion's Den is open later permanently on weekends because it will cost more to hire regular help for later hours, Berrana said. Student help was used during the two trial weekends.

The original request for later hours was made by Edward Frymoyer, president of the Association of Independent Men, at a meeting of the HUB Board last month.

The extended hours would provide a place for freshmen to go on weekends since they are not allowed to visit fraternities because of the deferred rushing program, Frymoyer said. Upperclass independents and fraternity members would probably also take advantage of the later hours, he said.

Members of AIM conducted a survey in the Lion's Den on Oct. 8 and reported that about 60 percent of those present were freshmen.

5 O'Clock Theatre To Hold Tryouts

Tryouts for the 5 O'Clock Theatre production of David Stekol's original folk comedy, "Gonna Shout All Over God's Heaven," will be held at 1 p.m. tomorrow in the Little Theatre in Old Main.

The tryouts will be held for four female roles and one male role.

Stekol is a senior in arts and letters. The play will be presented Nov. 4 and will be directed by Floyd Santoro, senior in theatre arts from Johnstown.

Marterie to Crown Prom Queen Tonight

Tonight's "Cinderella Ball" will crown its Cinderella when one of five finalists is named queen of the Junior Prom.

Vincent Marino, junior class president, will announce the queen at 10:30 p.m., during the intermission. He will present her with a trophy, and Bandleader Ralph Marterie will place the jewelled crown on her head.

Fifteen hundred tickets for the dance will go on sale from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. today at the Hetzel Union desk. The cost per couple is $5.

The semi-formal dance will be from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. tonight at Recreation Building, which will be decorated around the "Cinderella Ball" theme.

The five finalists for the Junior Prom Queen contest are: Daunna Doebler, art education major from Jersey Shore, Leonides; Audrey Finney, elementary education major from Havertown, Alpha Chi Omega; Faith Horne, art education major from Litzitz, Alpha Chi Omega; Diane Morocco, elementary education major from Pittsburgh, Gamma Phi Beta; and Marlynn Turki, physical education major from Cannonsburg.

They were chosen from over 65 applicants by a committee of the Junior Advisory Board. The chairman of the committee is Charles Blunt, junior in electrical engineering from Washington, D.C.

The queen will be picked by Alan Crabtree, Jack Harper, Bob Martin, Ethel Meserve and John Storch.

The winner will be announced at 10:30, during intermission, by Vincent Marino, junior class president, master of ceremonies. He will present the queen with a trophy and she will be crowned by Ralph Marterie with a rhinestone tiara.

The five finalists will receive free tickets to the prom and bouquets of roses from the advisory board.

Flag Ceremony Will Be Held For UN Day

A flag-raising ceremony at 11:30 a.m. today on the lawn in front of Old Main will mark the celebration of United Nations Day.

Twenty flags, representing nations that have three or more students enrolled in the University, and the United Nations Flag, will be a part of the program, which has been arranged by the University Committee on International Understanding.

Cadet William C. Westgard of Moorestown, N.J., commander of Scabbard and Blade, will be in charge of students participating in the program.

Participants include representatives of the Army, Navy and Air Force ROTC units, Pershing Rifles, Scabbard and Blade, Army Drill Team, Navy Drill Team and the Navy Band.

Following the playing of the national anthem and the flag raising ceremony, the troops will

Review

Challenging Play Is Rated Excellent

By DAVE FINEMAN
Collegian Drama Critic

Never in the reviewer's recollection has a Players cast—or a Schwab audience—been challenged as both were in the opening last night of Shaw's "Too True to Be Good."

It seems a foolish accessory to say "well done." For, excluding scattered weaknesses, the show as a whole was excellent.

The actors, as in most of the later Shavian plays, were speech-makers, but the show had enough cohesiveness and timing so that none of it intruded. And we thank director Warren Smith for it.

Ivan Ladizinsky, as the preacher-burglar (only one of his parts), was the poser of problems, the liar who in his lies gave us Shaw's "too true" truths.

Ladizinsky was master of his roles and, in spite of occasional meaningless and distracting gesturing, was extremely stimulating.

His other role was that of the pious sergeant whose frustrated groping was only too familiar, and one of Shaw's "too truths."

Shaw's baseless resolutions and character changes must have been a challenge to Pat Thompson, as the sickly, then mildly adventurous, daughter.

But she became the most sympathetic character and turned in a highly polished performance.

The reviewer does reserve the right to say, however, that she did take a while to find herself.

Ellis Grove, as the doctor and then the elder, could have troubled himself to learn his lines a little better, for they were choice ones. But either through fumbling or bad timing, the lines fell on disappointed ears.

His mien was effective, however, in excellently pointing up his absurd attitude.

Leonard Tarnowski, while perhaps a little weak as the monster-germ (one of the symbols a second viewing may help interpret), became marvelously funny as Private Meek, the imperturbable underling so necessary to his slow-to-appreciate superior.

Mary Minkewich was delightful as Sweetie, the nurse and fake countess. Her facial expressions were wonderful and she was able to give to the play its best humor and its earthy pivot point.
