

Bryan Green To Discuss 'Christianity'

The Rev. Canon Bryan Green will discuss man's relationship to God and the basic concepts of the Christian faith when he lectures here next week.

Canon Green will deliver a series of lectures on "Basic Christianity" at 7 p.m. Monday through Thursday in Schwab Auditorium.

Canon Green is now the rector of St. Martin's in the Bull Ring, Birmingham, one of the largest churches in England.

In his lectures he also will discuss the nature of God's active presence in history and His presence in men's social and personal affairs.

He will attempt to interpret the meaning of Jesus in relation to the academic and vocational pursuits of students. He also will try to relate this interpretation to the ultimate questions of man's existence.

Canon Green says his purposes in delivering these lectures are:

1. To present the basic content of the Christian faith from the perspective of the Protestant tradition.
2. To describe the relevance of the Christian faith to the problems of personal and cultural life in the 20th century.
3. To offer an encounter with a living faith which may stimulate and help students to grow in their own basic life commitments to God and their fellow man.

Canon Green has said he welcomes the challenging questions of faiths which oppose the Protestant tradition.

Canon Green will also deliver an afternoon lecture series at 4 p.m. Monday through Friday in the Hetzel Union ballroom on the subject, "Love, Friendship and Marriage."

"Sitting room only" will be featured and each student attending should bring a pillow or newspaper.

At these lectures Canon Green will discuss the meaning of love, how to know when one loves, difficulties in marriage today, interfaith marriage, the place of physical love, moral standards, problems arising in friendships, petting, the purpose of marriage, pre-marital relations and family planning and contraception.

•The present plan permits fifth semester and above transfer students to exempt physical education while a student 26 years of age may be required to take it. The question of age is pertinent to the value of the course, he said.

•If the plan were made elective, "spoon feeding," a common complaint among the faculty members, Feldstein said, would be reduced.

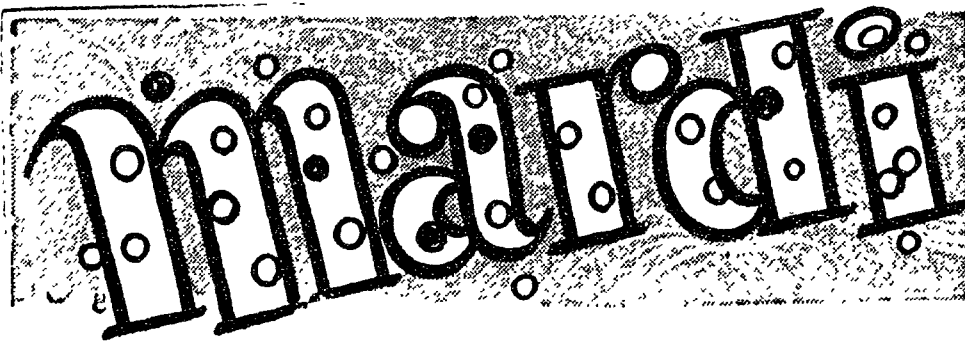

•The mature veteran would be able to pick out a practical sport to learn or study and one which would be able to benefit him later in life.

Feldstein refuted two assumptions which are used for support of the present plan.

He said "boot" camp provides the veteran with a physical training and a health education program which is much more complete than the University's program. Therefore the veterans can be assumed to be physically fit, he said.

He refuted the point that the physical education program develops skills of lasting benefit by saying that the interest in a sport would be greatly increased if the program were elective.

"Spoon feeding" the students with the knowledge and skills of sports would be eliminated with veterans under an elective system, Feldstein said.
