

ICCB OK's Plan For Career Day

The Inter-College Council Board has unanimously approved a motion to sponsor a campus-wide career exposition on April 22 and 23, 1959.

Jack Kendall, president of the Engineering and Architecture Student Council, was appointed chairman of the exposition.

The Business Administration Student Council has dropped its own career exposition to support the All-University career exposition, according to James Meister, president of the council.

Suspension Asked For Three Frosh

The Association of Independent Men's Judicial Board of Review has recommended that three first semester freshmen accused of holding a beer party in their residence hall be given suspended suspensions for the duration of the academic year.

If this recommendation is upheld by the Senate subcommittee on discipline, apprehension of any of the students in another misdemeanor would be cause for immediate suspension by the dean of men.

Two students were placed on office probation for lending identification cards to two freshmen, who used the cards to purchase beer.

The board recommended the buyers be placed on disciplinary probation. The case will automatically be referred to the Senate subcommittee.

A fifth student involved in the incident received office probation and a letter to his parents for giving the buyers $1 to purchase beer for him.

A second semester freshman was placed on office probation for possession and consumption of an alcoholic beverage.

Ossian B. McKenzie, dean of the College of Business Administration, said the Executive Committee of the college recommended to the Business Administration Student Council that they drop their own career day.

Meister proposed that an evening speaker such as those brought in by the College of Business Administration for their past expositions, be included in the program for the campus-wide career days.

Kendall's tentative schedule for the 2-day exposition includes open exhibits from 9 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, April 22; speaker, Wednesday night; open exhibits from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Thursday, April 23; a banquet Thursday night.

The proposed committees for the exposition include art, publicity, staging, service and banquet.

Members of the committees will be made up of students at the University. The chairmen of these committees will be members of the individual student councils and will form an executive committee of the entire exposition.

It was also decided to invite all the centers to attend the exposition.

In 1957, the Faculty Lunch Club discontinued the use of a whistle formerly used to call meetings to order, because of "sanitary reasons."

Brick Queen To Be Chosen In Pittsburgh

Rege Cordic, Pittsburgh's zany disc jockey, will be up to his annual shenanigans this afternoon with the "Miss Brick Throw of 1959" contest.

This is not one of those beauty contests, however, Cordic said. Miss Brick Throw must prove herself in an appropriate way—by throwing a brick farther than any other contestant.

Her rewards, besides a lot of humorous publicity, will include a free trip to New York and a 1950 Studebaker.

If you're thinking of attending the event, which will be held on the Monongahela Wharf, you can pick up your ticket at the Syria Mosque. There you can also pick up a sample brick for practicing in your living room, Cordic has promised, and a copy of THUD, national brickthrowers magazine.

Other highlights of the event will include Mother La Farge (Jeanne Baxter) singing "When Your Heart is Flooded with Love," "Look for Me Floating Among the Debris," and "You're the Hot Patch on the Inner Tube of My Heart that Keeps it from Going Flat Over You."

Negotiations are underway to bring an overseas brickthrow champion to Pittsburgh to compete against today's winner.

Cloudy and Windy Weather Expected

The Nittany Lion predicts the weather today will be partly cloudy, windy and milder with showers beginning this evening and possibly turning into snow flurries on Sunday. The high this afternoon is expected to be 58 with a low of 44 tonight.

RIGHT-TO-WEAR LEGISLATION is proposed at a Nittany 43 "town meeting" where residents gathered to protest the rule against wearing T-shirts in the dining hall.

Miss Agriculture To Reign at Party

The waiting period will be over tonight for the five finalists competing for the title of Miss Agriculture when the winner is announced at the eighth annual Ag Hill Party in Recreation Hall.

Coeds in the College of Agriculture chosen as finalists and their sponsors are:

Anne Gardner, junior in prevet from Egypt, Mass.; Delta Theta Sigma; Carol Forbes, senior in agricultural and biological chemistry from Rockwood, Alpha Zeta; Carol Frank, junior in landscape architecture from Wilkinsburg, Alpha Gamma Rho; Marilyn Painter, senior in animal husbandry from Pittsburgh; and Carolyn Ross, junior in medical technology from Lewisburg, Rod and Coccus Club.

The selection of Miss Agriculture is based upon scholastic achievement, participation in activities and leadership ability.

Dorothea Harmes, Miss Agriculture—1957-58, will present her successor with a trophy and bouquet.

"Cooperation on Ag Hill" is the theme chosen for this year's party. It represents the unity among the 18 agricultural clubs at the University.

Master of ceremonies will be Charles Carlson, senior in dairy science from Akeley. He will be assisted by John Stephens, junior in agricultural education from Cramer.

Other events planned for the evening include a turkey dinner at 5:30 p.m., presentation of scholarships and awards, bingo and square dancing.

Bingo and door prizes will include honey, packaged meat, cheese, ice cream, evergreens, shrubs and vegetables.

MHP Inventory Test

Adams Can Predict Marital Success

By BOBBI LEVINE

The sacred institution of marriage has now been taken over by auto-mate-shun.

Dr. Clifford R. Adams, head of the Marriage Counseling Service, has developed a test that can tell you about your chances for a successful marriage.

The test, known as the MHP Inventory (Marriage Happiness Prediction), was developed through studies begun at the University 20 years ago. Adams started his research with the hope that young people could be discouraged from entering marriages doomed to failure.

In the years 1937-39, Adams administered a series of 1000 questions to a group of about 4000 people about to be married. From these extensive personality tests he made predictions for the marriage happiness of the people involved.

He has been able to follow the success or failure of the marriages of 2614 of these people, and thus check the accuracy of the predictions he made.

By comparing the answers to his original questions given by the people who later found married happiness with those whose marriages were not happy, he was able to compile 300 significant questions from his first list. It is these questions which make up the test he now administers.

All of the couples Adams has been observing have been married at least eight years. "This is significant," he said, "because the great majority of divorces and broken marriages happen within the first eight years of married life."

The new test, Adams explained, measures interests, attitudes, standards, ideals and other qualities essential for a happy and companionable marriage. The test is useful not only in predicting success or failure before a young couple marry, but also in counseling married couples having difficulties.

Adams said, "We administer the test to persons who may come in who have problems where I feel it would be helpful to know their attitudes. If they make low scores I try to find out why they are scoring low."

From the test it can be determined whether or not the difficulty stems from a problem, such as faulty attitudes or immature personality which can often be corrected, or whether or not the marriage was a mistake and never had a chance to succeed.

Adams also administers the test to persons contemplating marriage in the near future and persons who are having troubles with their sweethearts.

In his studies Adams found that childhood, family relations and family background have a lot to do with the success of a marriage. Those who are most likely to be happy in marriage, he said, were brought up in homes where the parents were happily married. Their relationships with their parents were usually happy ones.

The test itself is made up of several sections designed to find out the degree to which people react to certain things. One part deals with the amount of liking a person has for certain things. A list of situations such as introducing people at a party or entertaining a group of friends at home are given.
