Out On a Limb

By BOB "Tree-trimmer" THOMPSON

The four fearless forecasters are really out on a limb in their picks of the top grid games this week.

In all, the quartet only agrees on three games—the Navy-Maryland tilt, the Army-Rice game and the Northwestern-Wisconsin scrap.

The "weaker sex" has entered the picking pact again this week. Louise Nixon, the secretary of the grid mentors has again set out to pick the games. Actually, calling Louise a member of the weaker sex is a gross error. Two weeks ago Louise ended up with the best record.

Magnificent Matt Mathews says he'll be picking all the tilts right for a change. He says he's consulted a special crystal belle, and he has all the answers down "PAT".

Genial George French, who at one time had an infallible system of picking games—a dart board—has been slipping in his picks. The feathers on the darts got wet the other day and the darts don't fly right.

French is steadily losing ground to Lucky Lou Prato. Prato has been improving steadily, but he can't do anything but improve. Here are the results of their endeavors for this week:

Druid Circle Will Play At Altoona

Players will present its production of John van Druten's "The Druid Circle" Tuesday at the Student Union Building at the Altoona Campus.

The theatre arts 111 class at Altoona will act as crew as well as hosts for the evening.

Janette Burns, a staff member at the campus, said the production was chosen for presentation because of its pertinent subject matter and because it will give students a chance to see a play staged in the arena style.

The play, which closes tomorrow night at Center Stage, is concerned with the entangled lives of students and faculty members of a small English university in the 1920's.

The basic story is one of conflict between youth and age. It depicts the decay which occurs in any circle where living becomes a routine. The characters in the play are representative of people that one might meet at any university.

"The Druid Circle" is directed by Kelly Yeaton, associate professor of theatre arts.

Players put on a performance outside of the university about once a year on special request. Their last performance of this kind was Red Peppers from Noel Coward's "Tonight at 8:30" which was given in Philipsburg during the spring semester of last year.

The last performance by Players given at a University center was Frederick Lonsdale's "On Approval" which was given on the Altoona campus and also in Lancaster for an alumni group in 1954.

Ellis Grove, publicity director for Players, said the members of Players hope they will be able to continue this policy, for it aids not only in their growth as an acting company but also in the growth of good theatre in near-by communities.
