Business Faculty Reveals Art, Ability

The business administration faculty has finally decided to reveal its artistic ability.

Following a suggestion by Ossian MacKenzie, dean of the College of Business Administration, a series of one-man art exhibits will be displayed in the faculty library in Boucke.

Phil A. Klein, assistant professor of economics, was responsible for arranging the series. He said the paintings will not only decorate, but help brighten up the faculty library.

The two-week exhibits will be the work of business administration faculty members, administrators and their wives. They are strictly amateurs. Klein stressed painting is an enjoyable hobby to them, he said.

A by-product of the series is to disprove the popularly-held theory that students of business administration are materialists concerned only with the pursuits of profit motives. Klein said they, too, are sensitive, he said, and appreciate the fine arts.

The work of Mrs. Enid Cutler, former wife of Howard A. Cutler, former head of the economics department, is featured in the first exhibit. Mrs. Cutler's paintings are mainly abstracts and express fairly complicated ideas and emotions. Her paintings will be on display until Dec. 5.

The artists scheduled to show their work range from realistic painters to those who paint non-objectively. The form that an artist uses doesn't indicate better quality in one case than in another, Klein said, but they enjoy doing a special form of art.

More people travel by automobile than by all other means of transportation combined. And more aggressive advertising dollars are invested in daily newspapers than in any other medium.

Students Pay WSGA to Sponsor For Damage Used Clothing Drive To Phones

Four students have paid costs and made restitution for damaging Bell Telephone Co. equipment in a borough rooming house at a hearing last Thursday before Justice of the Peace Guy G. Mills.

On Nov. 13 similar charges were made against six Hamilton Hall students, who paid over $100 and court costs.

Students in the most recent case were: Marvin Hill, sophomore in civil engineering from Pittsburgh; Thomas Havrilesky, junior in business administration from Conemaugh; Harold Cheatham, second semester freshman in psychology from New Kensington; and Ishmael Johnson, sophomore in landscape architecture from Natrona Heights.

The four students admitted jumping phone contacts, in the pay phone at the rooming house at 609 S. Allen St. By jumping the contacts, it was possible for the students to use the phone without submitting coins.

The case was dismissed from further legal processing, pending payment of costs and restitution, upon the request of Bell officials. Bell officials said they are tiring of the damage being done to their equipment.

Justice Mills said further actions of this sort may not be dismissed at the local level, but might be taken to the higher courts by the company.

Social Science Center To Hold Annual Meeting

The Social Science Research Center will hold its annual fall meeting at 8 p.m., Dec. 8 in the Hetzel Union Building.

Dr. Delbert Miller, professor of sociology, will present "Human Factors in Organization Efficiency: A Case Study in the Radar Defense of the United States and Japan."

The Women's Student Government Association House of Representatives will sponsor a clothing drive Dec. 4 to 20.

Boxes for used clothing will be put in the hostesses' rooms in the residence halls and in the West Halls and Nittany areas. The executive committee of the Interfraternity Council has asked that boxes also be placed in fraternity houses.

Any clothing, men's or women's, will be accepted as long as it is clean, according to Jessie Janjigian, chairman of the House. The State College American Friends Society will send the clothes to needy families in the county or overseas.

Bonnie Clark, representing the residence halls, and Elaine Baker, who will work in town, are chairmen of the drive.

House members will collect large boxes from the residence hall janitors and have them put in the hostesses' rooms. Miss Baker will ask friends from town to pick up the clothes and take them to the Friends' Society.

The whole project will be voluntary.

WSGA has sponsored clothing drives for several years. Miss

Janjigian said they are held around this time of year because students might have used clothing to throw away when they go home for Thanksgiving. The project has no connection with Christmas, she said.

Miss Janjigian said she expects the project to be very successful.

Caps, Gowns Available For January Graduates

Seniors and graduate students who will graduate in January may now place their orders for caps and gowns with the Athletic Store.

Students may sign up according to this schedule: engineering and education majors, today and tomorrow; liberal arts and business administration, Dec. 1 and 2; agriculture, chemistry and physics, Dec. 3 and 4; home economics, mineral industries and physical education, Dec. 5 and 6.

January graduates may also order invitations and announcements at the Hetzel Union desk.
