

Over 700 Students Enrolled In Correspondence Program

By BETSY ANDERSON and HELEN McCAFFERTY

More than 700 students do their class work while sitting in an easy chair at home.

How? Through the University correspondence course program.

This program affords the students the opportunity of making up required credits that they have failed or find themselves lacking as graduation approaches.

Each course involves eight lessons per credit at $12 per credit. When these lessons have been completed, the final examination may be taken anywhere just as long as there is a University-approved proctor present.

All the courses are authored and graded by the faculty in the various departments. The faculty members are appointed to this program by the department heads. The Extension Director is the coordinating head of the entire program.

The home-study courses are divided into five categories: high school courses, industrial training and supplementary technical institute programs, supplementary undergraduate college credit courses for the two-year associate degree, supplementary undergraduate college credit courses for a four-year baccalaureate degree and college credit courses for teacher certification and professional advancement in special fields of interest.

Credits gained through the correspondence course are identical with those earned during classroom instruction. However, the credits may not apply towards a graduate degree.

The most successful development of correspondence courses is found with students who "budget their time, have the ability to self-motivate, read and write the best English," said Oscar Spencer, director of correspondence education.

"Failures in the courses somewhat parallel those on campus," Spencer said.

The total active course enrollment, other than University students, reached over 8000 last year.

THEY SAID IT COULDN'T BE DONE!

Who would believe you could get college credits by watching TV? But television now offers daily classes in atomic physics — and over 300 colleges and universities across the nation are giving credit for TV courses.

Puff by puff Less tars & More taste

DON'T SETTLE FOR ONE WITHOUT THE OTHER!

Change to L&M and get 'em both. Such an improved filter and more taste! Better taste than in any other cigarette. Yes, today's L&M combines these two essentials of modern smoking enjoyment — less tars and more taste — in one great cigarette.

LIGHT INTO THAT LIVE MODERN FLAVOR!
