Student Out For Altering Matric Card

By JANET DURSTINE

A junior man who presented an altered matriculation card at the Town House was dismissed from the University by the Senate Subcommittee on Discipline yesterday.

He may return to the University only upon approval of the president, with the recommendation of the dean of his college. He must leave campus this weekend.

A photographer friend of the student's had taken a picture of his matriculation card when he was home earlier this semester. The birthdate on the newly-made card was altered to 1937.

The student said he had not had the card made for the specific purpose of obtaining alcoholic beverages, but just "to see how it was done."

The Town House management reported the incident to the University.

Tribunal had recommended disciplinary probation until the end of the spring semester for the student.

The subcommittee upheld another Tribunal recommendation for disciplinary probation until the end of the spring semester for a sophomore man caught with another student's draft card while making a disturbance downtown.

The draft card had a 1937 birthdate. The student told Tribunal he had not used the card to obtain alcoholic beverages the night he was making the disturbance, but he had tried to use it other times and had been refused.

The student was apprehended by State College police Nov. 26

Russian Diplomat To Lecture Here

Vladimir F. Morozov, Third Secretary of the Embassy of Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, will present open lectures on the Soviet Union Thursday and Friday on campus.

Thursday's lecture will be at 8 p.m. in the Mineral Sciences auditorium. The subject of this lecture has been left up to Mr. Morozov and the topic will be announced at the time of the lecture.

Mr. Morozov's lecture on Friday will be at 11 a.m. in the Hetzel Union assembly room. The topic for this lecture is "Minorities in the Soviet Union."

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF ROTC was revealed last night to William Tydings, Madeleine Power, Paul Lechner and Kathy Eakon as they danced to the music of Billy May's orchestra at Mil Ball in Recreation Building.

Susan Graham Is 1958 Mil Ball Queen

Susan Graham was chosen queen of the Military Ball last night in Recreation Building.

She is a junior in arts and letters from Bloomington, Ill., and was sponsored by John Kubert of the Air Force ROTC.

Some 800 couples watched as band leader Billy May crowned Miss Graham. She wore a pale blue satin and marquisette floor length gown.

The other finalists were Judy Norton, sophomore in

Piccone Named Business Head

Robert Piccone, senior in journalism from Philadelphia, has been named business manager of The Daily Collegian.

He will succeed Frank Vojta-sek, senior in journalism from Reading, who will be graduated in January.

Piccone, who has been assistant local advertising manager since May, will become business manager on Monday. He was named to the post by the Board of Directors of Collegian, Inc., the newspaper's publisher, upon recommendation of the Business Staff Senior Board.

George McTurk, junior in labor-management relations from Pittsburgh, has been named by the senior board to succeed Piccone. McTurk has been a member of The Collegian's local advertising staff.

education from Merion, sponsored by John Dunn of the Army ROTC; Judy Tifenberg, sophomore in arts and letters from Syracuse, N.Y., sponsored by Gary Fry of the Army ROTC; Cynthia Frederick of Springfield, sponsored by Ward Muller of the Air Force ROTC; and Joan Aitken of Philadelphia, sponsored by George Ward of the Air Force ROTC.

Miss Frederick and Miss Aitken are not students at the University.

Miss Graham received a trophy and a bouquet. The other finalists received smaller trophies.

Scabbard and Blade and Pershing Rifles formed a sabre arch and cordon for the finalists as they walked to the stage with their escorts.

Red, white and blue decorations carried out the military theme of the dance. Flags from all branches of the service and the American flag were displayed. Hundreds of students danced to Billy May's orchestra under a dark blue ceiling decoration.

Prexy Notes Rise In Faculty Salary

The average faculty member's salary has increased about 11 per cent during the 1957-59 biennium, President Eric A. Walker said yesterday.

"Gratifying as these advances are," he said, "they still leave us in an unfavorable position with those American universities with which we must compete for top-flight scholars and scientists.

"For this reason, salary increases have top priority in the appropriation request I shall make to the governor and the legislature in January."

Walker has not yet disclosed how much he is asking from the Legislature for the 1959-61 biennium.

Full professors received the biggest salary increase this biennium, 12.4 per cent. The average salary for a full professor is now $10,175 a year. The average 10-month salary is $8,670.

Other faculty average salaries are: associate professor, $8,055 a year and $6,942, 10 months; assistant professor, $6,863 a year and $5,788, 10 months; instructor, $5,587 a year and $5,044, 10 months.

Walker said that recent salary raises were made strictly on a merit basis. "By this means we have been able to hold most of our best people," he said, "but salary adjustments granted at comparable institutions during the same two years compel us to do much better next year."

He said the two basic sources for funds for salary increases are new money and the optimum use of the money now available.

Anything the faculty can do to enhance its own productivity, Walker said, will augment the funds for salary increases as effectively as a larger appropriation would.

Walker expressed appreciation for faculty and staff cooperation in pioneering experiments to raise the University's effectiveness, both qualitatively and quantitatively.

Accident Aid Was Proper Olver Says

Elwood P. Olver, director of the Department of Security, listed the facts today concerning the "emergency aid" given Wednesday morning to an accident victim.

"From the time the patrol received the call," Olver said, "I think the situation was handled correctly."

Eye witnesses reprimanded the Campus Patrol for its slow action. The accident occurred when Albert J. Swearingen, instructor in agricultural engineering extension, broke his leg in a fall on the ice near the Agricultural Engineering Building.

Two witnesses, J. D. Hovanessian, assistant professor of agricultural engineering, and a graduate student in the same curriculum, submitted a statement to The Daily Collegian referring to the tardiness in the arrival of an ambulance.

After the initial call, Lt Harold F. Lewis on duty in the Campus Patrol office, contacted a patrolman in a radio car and sent him to the accident.

Lewis said the witness who called the station did not ask for an ambulance. He merely said a man had fallen on the ice, and that he wanted a patrol car.

When the patrolman arrived at the scene and saw how badly Swearingen was hurt, he immediately called the station.

'S' Club To Institute Best Athlete Award

An annual award to honor Penn State's "outstanding athlete" will be instituted this year by the Varsity "S" Club.

According to "S" Club president Howie Maierhofer, the award will "be presented to the most valuable and outstanding personality on the combined intercollegiate athletic teams on campus."

Final judging for the award will be made by a 5-man committee after preliminary selections by the letterwinners of respective teams.

The judges will include the University's athletic director and sports publicity director; the sports editor of The Daily Collegian; the sports editor of The Centre Daily Times, borough newspaper; and the faculty adviser of the "S" Club.

Although the award will be called the "Outstanding Athlete Award", athletic achievement is only one qualification. A candidate for the honor must have an All-University average of 2.0 or better and must be free from a University probationary record—scholastic or disciplinary.

The award is not limited to seniors for no specific academic year is required. But the recipient must be an active letter-winner on a Penn State varsity team. The honor will be bestowed at the annual "S" Club banquet in late May and a trophy or plaque will be given.

All-U Career Day

Plans Lack Cooperation

By NICKI WOLFORD

Lack of money and lack of response to letters asking for recommended companies are holding up plans for the proposed All-University Career Day, according to Jack Kendall, chairman for the exposition.

Kendall said, in a report to the Inter-College Council Board Thursday night, that money is needed to finance the exposition in order to avoid asking companies invited to the exposition to pay for the space they will use.

Companies, if they pay for coming to the exposition, will have "every right to recruit," James Meister, president of the Business Administration Student Council, said.

Kendall said an attempt should be made to "keep down" recruiting because uninvited companies and the informative agencies invited would be at a disadvantage.

The exposition is scheduled to be held in the Hetzel Union Building. Since the HUB was a student financed building and a career day would benefit all students, ICCB members felt that space in the HUB should be free or at least at a minimum cost.

ICCB has already given Kendall $100 to begin the plans for the exposition. This money will be used to hire secretaries and to buy stationery, etc., Kendall said.

Kendall said when he asked groups for money "they didn't want to commit themselves or wanted to see what everyone else does."

Some of the colleges have not answered the request for recommended companies for the exposition, according to Kendall. If they did reply they only sent the names of men not companies or agencies, he said.

The Colleges of the Liberal Arts, of Physical Education, of Education and of Agriculture have not answered, he said.

According to Kendall, letters were sent to the deans of each college asking for a list of companies they would like to see invited to the exposition.

Kendall also appointed the following students as chairmen of exposition committees: Wade Nutter, staging; Kathryn Briggs, banquet; Charlotte Flack, secretariat; Floyd Greer, service; Charles Barb, art; James Cober, publicity.
