

Four Professors Granted Leaves from University

Four professors have recently been granted leaves of absence from the University.

Miss Pauline Locklin, professor of English Literature, has been given leave from Feb. 1 to June 30, 1959 so that she may do research in Great Britain on the background of the poetry of Edmund Spenser, the Elizabethan poet. She plans to spend most of her time in London and Southern Ireland.

Sommerfeld Named Prof, Assistant Dean

Edna Sommerfeld has been named assistant dean for extension in the College of Home Economics and has been made professor of home economics by the Board of Trustees.

Dr. Ruth Honey, director of home economics research, was named assistant dean for research in the college, and will continue as professor of family economics and housing.

Formerly district extension supervisor at Michigan State University, Miss Sommerfeld will relieve Delpha Wiesendanger of her duties for summer services.

Miss Sommerfeld will be responsible for resident credit teaching of home economics subjects in the Centers; the extension credit or non-credit courses on the main campus and the Centers; correspondence courses of the college; and all other services of the college both on and off the main campus.

Miss Wiesendanger will be responsible for the physical facilities of the college. She will continue as head of the department of home management, housing and home art and as chairman of the division of home management, family economics, housing and home equipment.

Chess Club Discussion

A forthcoming simultaneous exhibition with Samuel Reshevsky, famous chess player, will be the topic for discussion at an important meeting of Chess Club at 7 tonight in 7 Sparks.

The meeting is open to all students.

Warren Smith, associate professor of theatre arts, was managing director of last summer's plays.

For the first time, apprenticeships will be offered next year to students to work for the professional company. They will receive room and board free.

All but five of the company and students will be housed on campus. Classes in acting and production will be given in Schwab Auditorium. Free bus transportation will be provided to students who have laboratory work at the playhouse.

In addition to regular instruction, Walters will teach two courses—creative dramatics and puppetry—for children during the mid-session.

Werner and Cunningham were also dominant forces in a United States gymnastic victory over Canada this past summer. Wettstone also displayed a fourth ace gymnast at the Canadian meet in freshman Greg Weiss.

But the most experienced performer for both his collegiate schedule and the Finnish meet is Vega.

With a year of eligibility remaining, Vega dropped out of school last spring and trained for the World Gymnastics Championships in Moscow in which he competed. Besides the "Worlds" competition, Vega competed on various State Department-sponsored good-will exhibitions throughout Europe and the Middle East. During his sophomore and junior collegiate competition, Vega was the Eastern and National champion on the parallel bars and all-around.
