DuMars Paces Cagers In 89-81 Overtime Loss

By SANDY PADWE

Mark DuMars earned himself a place in the hearts of Penn State basketball fans last night at Recreation Building even though the Lions lost to West Virginia in overtime, 89-81.

The 5-10 magician scored 30 points—23 of them coming in the second half to keep the Lions in the game and eventually send the tilt into overtime before 5500 screaming fans.

Despite the great performance by DuMars, Jerry West of West Virginia topped the scorers with 32 points but it was DuMars who got the cheers.

With the Lions down by five, 37-32, after an exciting see-saw first half, DuMars put on a one-man scoring splurge to tie the game at 38-38. The lead then see-sawed back and forth until West dumped in three consecutive baskets to give West Virginia a six-point bulge at the 15:00 minute mark.

The Lions and Mounties traded baskets until DuMars dropped a one hand push from 30 feet out and put the Lions only four behind, 52-48. Bob Edwards followed with a three point play to bring the Lions within one point, 52-51.

West Virginia's Bucky Bolyard came right back with a three-point play and West scored on a rebound and jumper to put the Mounties up by eight, 59-51.

Then came the Lions' best spurt of the night as they tied the game. Edwards converted a foul and DuMars hit another foul and field goal to bring the Lions within four, 59-55. Ted Kubista hit on a jumper and Tom Hancock threw in a sweeping hook to knot the count at 59-59.

A few seconds later the Lions received a bad break when Hancock fouled out with less than seven minutes remaining. The 6-4 rebound leader was sorely missed under the boards and according to Penn State coach John Egli this was one of the turning points in the game.

After Paul Sweetland and Bob Clousson traded fouls to knot the score at 60-60 the teams went into their see-saw act again.

DuMars scored seven more points in the next few minutes and the Lions found themselves ahead by one, 69-68. Clousson put the Mounties in the lead with 1:50 left, 70-69.

Wally Colender threw in a long jump shot at 1:37 to give the Nittanians a one-point edge. Then there was a scramble under the West Virginia basket and West had two foul shots. He missed one and made the other to tie the score at 71-71.

The Lions took possession and froze the ball for a last shot but the shot by Colender

Clear Skies, Cold To Continue Today

Sunny skies with continuing cold have been forecast for today. Temperatures will rise to an afternoon high of 2. degrees after a morning low of 10 degrees. Sub-freezing temperatures and clear weather will continue through the weekend. The snow predicted for yesterday bypassed the state when a low pressure system took a more southerly path than was expected.

Cabinet to Request Breakdown of Fees

By CATHY FLECK

All-University Cabinet will ask the administration for a breakdown of how student fees are spent at both the University and the campuses and centers.

The motion, made by Robert LaBar, Agriculture Student Council president, provides that a committee consisting of All-University President Jay Feldstein, Executive Assistant John D'Angelo and LaBar make this request.

The purposes of the request will be to find out how student fees are spent and how the centers fit into these expenditures. Reasons given by LaBar for the proposed breakdown were:

• The repeated protests voiced by the students at the University regarding the distribution of these fees in connection with the Senior Class gift, artists series and the sound-proofing of Schwab auditorium.

• Students at the various centers pay higher fees than those on the main campus and yet have little social, recreational and educational facilities.

• Students at the centers have little voice in how these fees are distributed.

LaBar said that students at the Mont Alto campus do not have an up-to-date library or recreational facilities except for the YMCA gymnasium and must still pay the same fees as students on the main campus. He also said "There is a feeling among students at the centers that they are getting

Penn State's answer to TV "Spectaculars" takes the floor of Recreation Building at 7:30 tonight with Finland's men and women gymnastic teams in the starring role.

Both teams should put on particularly appealing shows. The female unit will be the first such girls team to perform in Rec Hall since the Swedes put on an entertaining performance in 1955.

And the European championship men's team, which hasn't finished lower than third in the last three Olympics, will compete with a collegiate unit of Penn State gymnasts.

During the Christmas vacation, Sarasota, Fla., fans got a sneak preview of tonight's all-around battle among three of the world's best all-around gymnasts—the Finn duo of Olavi Leimuvirta and Eugen Ekman and Penn State's own Olympian, Armando Vega.

At the Sarasota clinic, Leimuvirta, whom Lion coach Gene Wettstone considers "one of the world's best gymnasts," edged Vega and Ekman by two points, 556-554.

Tonight will probably be the (Continued on page eight)

To Become Member Of Trustees Jan. 20

By BOB FRANKLIN
Collegian Editor

HARRISBURG—Gov.-elect. David L. Lawrence last night came out in favor of open meetings of the University's Board of Trustees.

Lawrence also expressed concern over educational finances. However, he said, his educational program would depend on income so that he could not give any specifics.

He spoke to a press conference of the Central Penn Chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, men's professional journalism fraternity, in the American Legion Home here.

Concerning the Trustees' meetings, he said:

"I think that particularly there ought to be a full degree of publicity. I see no reason why there shouldn't."

Lawrence will become an ex-officio member of the Board on Jan. 20 when he is inaugurated as governor. As mayor of the city of Pittsburgh, he is now a member of the Board of Trustees of the University of Pittsburgh and will continue in that capacity as governor.

HARRISBURG — Gov.-elect David L. Lawrence last night reaffirmed his stand in favor of the Keystone Shortway and plans to go along with it.

Lawrence drew a distinction between the boards of other colleges in Pennsylvania and that of Penn State as "the state university."

Asked about extension of the state's "right to know" laws, which includes the status of the Trustees' meetings, the Pittsburgh mayor said:

"Anywhere where official action is taken should be open."

Concerning his educational program, the governor-elect said:

"I'm very deeply concerned with educational progress."

He said thousands and thousands of boys and girls with (Continued on page five)

Fish Killing Investigation To Begin

A task force will be named within a few days to seek the sources of potential pollution in the Spring Creek water basin which has been the scene of recent trout killings.

Early and decisive action in seeking out the sources of the potential pollution was promised yesterday after a meeting between University representatives, Dr. Michael A. Farrell vice president for research and Albert E. Diem, vice president for business administration and two state agencies—the Fish Commission and the Department of Health.

The decision to go ahead with the full-scale study was reached at the 2-hour meeting held at the invitation of President Eric A. Walker. Several weeks ago Walker offered the research services of the University to the State in an effort to clear up the mystery.

Last month more than 5000 young trout were killed at the Banner Springs project within a matter of weeks by a pollution of undetermined source.

Representatives yesterday decided to create a 6- or 7-man "task force" within a few days and commission this group to begin work immediately. The men also agreed to seek the services of a nationally known authority for consultation.

All three groups concerned, the two state agencies and the University have agreed to pool their resources to seek the sources of the potential pollution in the Spring Creek water basin.

The committee agreed that the study should not just concern itself with the immediate problem of the fish-killing but also with the large problem of erecting safeguards against recurrent pollution along the entire watershed.

Two representatives of the University are expected to be named to the committee along with other aquatic biologists, sanitary engineers and bio-chemists.

Class Schedules Altered Next Week

The class schedule for the first three days of next week will be altered to compensate for the classes that were missed during the Thanksgiving vacation.

On Monday students will follow their Thursday schedule, and on Tuesday their Friday schedule. Wednesday morning the Saturday schedule will be in effect, with the afternoon following the normal class schedule.

Classes for fall semester will end at 5 p.m. Wednesday, with final examinations beginning 8 a.m. Thursday and continuing until 5:30 p.m. Friday, Jan. 23.

$36,900 in Grants Given For Research Projects

The National Science Foundation has made two grants totaling $36,900 in support of research projects.

Dr. Sidney Siegel, associate professor of psychology, will conduct basic research under a grant of $21,700.

Dr. Rolf G. Winter, assistant professor of physics, will conduct a project on "High Energy Particle Interactions" under a grant of $15,200.
