

Va. Intergrates Seven Schools

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Virginia glumly gave way to racial integration yesterday and hesitantly took 21 Negro children into seven white schools.

The Negro pupils came and went unmolested at schools in Norfolk and Arlington County. In each community, a few white children refused to attend school with them, picked up their books and left.

Special police details turned out to maintain order. But there were no commotions, serious incidents or even any cat-palls.

White House press secretary James C. Hageity said in Washington that President Eisenhower had been following the integration process in Virginia quite closely and "thinks it a fine thing that it has been orderly."
