DuMars, Colender Pace Cagers' Win Penn State's freshman basketball team went on a scoring spree Coach Swegan, who had his team Friday afternoon at Altoona and playing a pressing defense the enran up a lopsided 107-61 victory ture second half. Penn State's "backcourt bombers"—Mark DuMars and Wally Colender—were at it over a completely outclassed Altoona Center five. The boys really hustled," said coach Swegan, who had his team playing a pressing defense the enture second half. Shea, Bob Hutchinson, and Martiona Center five.

again Saturday night, scoring 42 points between them to spark the Lion cagers to a 74-56 Win over Rutgers at Rec Hall.

n over Rutgers at Rec Hall.

DuMars was high with 22 while Colender had 20. But it was Colender whose hot hand honors with 20 points.

The Altona aggregation, which posts a respectable 14-5 season required by the record of the put the Lions back into the lead after they blew a 13-point halftime bulge.

Trailing 31-18 at the end of the; first half, Rutgers faced by Karol Strelecki, caught fire and over-took the Lions, 45-44, with 9:30 remaining Then Colender started to connect. The 6-2 junior star from Trenton, NJ, hit for 12 points within three minutes to break the back of theh Rutgers rally. During his scoring spree Colen-der had two 3-point plays and three long jump shots.

The injured Bob Edwards, who only played briefly, also came through during these three minutes to help Colender. He had five points and came up with two important rebounds that eventually went for buck-

After Colender gave the Lions the lead at 8:40, they had no trouble with the hustling Scarlet five. The Lion defenses tightened at this point and only allowed Rutgers 11 more points The first half was completely different. It started out slowly and the tempo didn't pick up until the half was almost over. With six minutes remaining, the score was fied at 14. Then Du-Mars began hitting with uncanny accuracy and the Lions zoomed into the lead, leaving the Scarlet 13 points behind at halftime.

Then came the action-packed second half which saw the Lions lose the lead and regain it on Colender's sensational scoring streak.

After the Lions had built up a comfortable lead with a few minutes to go. Colender and DuMars put on a dribbling exhibition that had the fans going wild. They controlled the ball for two min-utes before Colender kicked it out of bounds

They put on a similar show last week against Syracuse but it wasn't as spectacular. Twice, Saturday, DuMars was almost on the floor but he managed to hold 5 onto the ball.

Soph Don Wilson and junior Paul Sweetland, who were filling in for Ted Kubista and Edwards, respectively, did a commendable job, accordingto Egli.

Sweetland scored 10 points and came through with some important rebounds. Wilson had only three points but his hustle gave the fans something to talk about.
