

Orchestra's History Lists Many Firsts

The first visit of the Philadelphia Orchestra to the University this Saturday will be just one of many firsts for the group.

It was the first symphonic ensemble to make a record. On Oct. 22, 1917, the entire orchestra under the direction of Leopold Stokowski, crossed the Delaware River and marched on the RCA Victor studio in Camden, N.J.

After a full day's struggle they turned out the world's first symphonic records—the Fifth and Sixth Hungarian Dances by Johannes Brahms.

The battle was won over the stiff opposition of primitive re-

Recording equipment. Today it has the most impressive recollection of recordings in the world.

Not until the orchestra was featured in "The Big Broadcast of 1937" had a front-rank ensemble been featured in a film. Stokowski and the orchestra followed their screen debut with "100 Men and a Girl" starring the then popular Deanna Durbin.

Several years later the orchestra made the sound track for Walt Disney's experimental cartoon, "Fantasia."

The Philadelphians broadcast the first commercially-sponsored symphonic broadcast in the United States on Oct. 6, 1929. Carried by the National Broadcasting Company the program reached 50 stations and was relayed to Europe, South America and Asia by short wave.

The string of orchestra firsts has continued up to modern times. Under the direction of Eugene Ormandy the orchestra was the first symphony to appear before the television cameras.

On March 20, 1948, they broadcast an hour-long program over the Columbia Broadcasting System.

From crossing the Delaware to spanning the airwaves the Philadelphia Orchestra has had a long list of firsts in its history.

VA Representative to Visit

A representative of the Veterans Administration will visit the campus on Wednesday. He will be in 6 Old Main from 10 a.m. to 3:15 p.m.

Men May Eat in Coeds' Dining Halls

By JANET DURSTINE

"Would you like to have dinner with me in the dining hall?"

Coeds might start asking their dates this question if Rachel Milligan, assistant to the dean of women in charge of social and cultural activities, has her way.

Miss Milligan is encouraging coeds to make more use of the residence hall facilities, and inviting men to eat in the dining halls is one of the ways she suggests.

Miss Milligan said professors had been asked to speak in the residence hall lounges, and the professors' names and topics on which they would be willing to speak would be posted in the halls. If any group of women wished to hear a certain professor, they could notify Miss Milligan.

The only cost for the dining hall dinner, Miss Milligan said, would be $1.50 for the man—the woman's meal ticket would already be paid for. And if the man eats in a residence hall dining room himself, then all he has to do is give his meal ticket number to Food Service, and he can eat in the coed's dining room free.

If more than 10 or 15 guests are to eat in the dining hall, Miss Milligan said, Food Service would be notified, so an adequate amount of food may be prepared.

Miss Milligan also said she hoped to show films from the audio-visual library in the lounges.

In connection with this program, football Coach Rip Engle will show movies of the Pitt game March 4 in Ewing Hall.

Any woman may attend these lectures, Miss Milligan said. She also said sororities are being encouraged to use their suites for fraternity-sorority socials.

Landscape Post Given To Trainer

Walter W. Trainer has been named head of the Division of Landscape Planning.

Paul W. Pierson, Trainer's assistant for 13 years, has been named to take over Trainer's job as head of the Division of Landscape Maintenance.

Both appointments are effective immediately.

Trainer will now be responsible for landscape planning on the main campus and at the centers. He has been responsible for the landscaping development on this campus for the past 29 years.

Pierson will have charge of landscape maintenance on this campus and will also have charge of farm maintenance.

Trainer received his bachelor of arts degree in landscape architecture from the University in 1923. He was granted the master of science degree in 1935. Trainer worked for Thomas W. Sears, Philadelphia landscape architect from 1923 to 1930 and then came to the University to accept the position as supervisor of landscape construction and maintenance.

Pierson was named Trainer's assistant supervisor in 1946 and became assistant to the head of the Division of Landscape Maintenance when Trainer was appointed head in 1955.

Pierson was graduated from the University in 1939 with a bachelor of science degree in landscape architecture. Before he joined the University staff in 1946, he held positions on the Pennsylvania Department of Highways and worked as a landscape architect for a firm in Trenton, N.J.

lature through the power of veto." Cabinet members also questioned the proposal of electing members of the legislature by class, as the best possible means of representation. It was pointed out that through this system, political parties would be given more power in that they would determine who would run for office.

Thalimer pointed out that only through classes would the best possible representation be realized. He cited that the other forms of representation would have to be 1) college, 2) living area and 3) interest groups.

Thalimer argued that the present Cabinet which is seeking reorganization is comprised of interest groups, the diversity of size in the various colleges would provide uneven representation, and through representation by living area, independents would outnumber other factions on campus. Cabinet members in view of the facts given by Thalimer, defeated a motion made by Donald Zepp to delete representation by class from the proposal. Zepp had no suggestions as to what would be put in its place if the motion were accepted.

Cabinet members also voted to retain Thalimer's proposal that the executive body under the new plan be comprised of both elective and appointive members. Alton Kendall, had previously moved that the Cabinet be composed of appointive members only, because the president can then decide who he needs most to advise him on legislation.

Members, in defeating Kendall's motion, said that the Cabinet should be a compromise between those advisers that the president wants and those elected by various groups.

Cold Weather From North Will Continue Until Sunday

The cold weather that moved into University Park yesterday will continue for at least two more days. The strong surge of cold arctic air that pushed south-eastward out of Western Canada on Tuesday seems to be taking its own time in moving eastward. This will insure a continuation of the bitterly cold weather on into Sunday.

The storm system that passed south of the Commonwealth late Tuesday became a vigorous low pressure system yesterday as it moved off the New England coast, resulting in strong winds, a few snow flurries and the advection of much colder air into Pennsylvania.

The forecast for today is for a continuation of the intensely cold weather accompanied by gusty winds. The temperature will rise slowly from a morning low of zero to an afternoon high of only 19 degrees. Tonight and tomorrow will see a continuation of the cold and blustery weather with tonight's low near zero.
