

'Stories' Chosen Theme Of 1959 Spring Week

"Stories Through the Ages" will be the theme of the 1959 Spring Week—the last week in April.

The theme will be divided into three categories: the Greek and Roman Era, the Middle Ages and the Twentieth Century.

Television coverage of the float parade is now in the negotiation stage, according to Juri Niller, general chairman of the week.

A re-aligned point system will be used this year to decide the Spring Week winner. The float parade will be worth 30 points for first place, 20 for second and 10 for third. Last year first place in the parade was worth 25 points.

The first eight He-Men from the preliminaries will also qualify their corresponding Queen of Hearts for the finals. In the same way, the first eight Queen of Hearts will qualify their corresponding He-Men for the finals.

The first place entry in the athletic event will be awarded 15 points with the second, third, fourth and fifth place entries getting 11, 8, 5 and 3 respectively. Last year the winner of the He-Man contest received 15 points, with the Queen of Hearts getting five.

The final change in the point scoring will be in the Miss Penn State contest. Last year the winner got 15 points while the other finalists received eight. Under the new system the winner will be awarded five points with the other finalists getting three.

Dancing Classes Cancelled

The dancing classes scheduled for today, tomorrow and Thursday in the Hetzel Union ballroom have been canceled because of the instructor's illness.

Ormandy Digs Russian Audiences

By JEFF POLLACK

The American people have a lot of catching up to do to match the Russians in the appreciation of great music.

This was the opinion of Eugene Ormandy, conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra in an interview Saturday.

Ormandy called the Russian audiences the "best in the world." He said they learn great music when they are children and understand it better than we do.

On his recent tour of Europe, which included Russia and other Iron Curtain countries, Ormandy said he saw long lines of people—some of them hungry—waiting to buy concert tickets.

He said some of them had not eaten for three or four days in order to buy the tickets because they consider it emotional food.

They are so starved for great music and had heard so much about us (the Philadelphia) that they came backstage and wanted to see if they could find the hidden tricks in our instruments that made them sound better than theirs.

Ormandy said the musicians and composers they met on the tour wanted to know about the life of musicians in the United States. They also wanted to know how composers live and are supported here.

The Russian people "don't have to be subjected to jazz—thank God," Ormandy said.

(Ormandy includes in the word jazz, rock and roll and "all that screaming on the radio." He did not say whether he includes progressive jazz in this group.)

He said the Russian people are subjected to great music. They only have jazz in cafes for dancing and on the radio for a half-hour a day. "I wish it was like that here," he said.

"We will only reach that stage when we put more emphasis on great music than on dance music," Ormandy said. He said he could not see this happening in the present college students' lifetime.

Ormandy said that while radio is good for promoting music it is not enough. The very recent development of stereo recordings is an important step, he said. "It makes you feel like you are right in the middle of the orchestra."

Opposed to federal aid because "politics creep in," Ormandy said some kind of aid—perhaps federal—may be necessary for the secondary orchestras that are forced to struggle with a small annual budget.

Collegian Business Staff

Walker--

(Continued from page one) must evaluate itself and determine whether it can meet the needs of the growing student body. With continuing inflation, can fraternities raise the money for their operation and will students be able to afford fraternity life, Walker asked.

Walker complimented the University's fraternity system and said its performance was far better than average. But he urged them to take a look at their methods of selection and to determine whether more students should and could be afforded the opportunities of a fraternity.

"Fraternities should play a more important part in the life of a University student," Walker said. They should give the students a sense of belonging and provide the answer to the charge that a large University is impersonal, he said.

The aims of the fraternity system and the University must be in unison and the fraternities must adjust to more serious scholarship standards.

'Last Lecture' Series Begins Tonight

Three professors will give their "Last Lectures" in a series beginning tonight sponsored by Mortar Board, senior women's honorary society.

Dr. Robert K. Murray, associate professor of American history, will be the first to present a lecture as if it were the last in his career. He will speak on "Cream—No Sugar" at 7 tonight in the Hetzel Union assembly room.

This will be the third year that Mortar Board has sponsored the "Last Lecture" series.

The remaining two lectures this year will be given on March 3 and on March 10, also at 7 p.m. in the HUB assembly room.

Aaron Druckman, associate professor of philosophy, will speaking on "What Next" on March 3 and Walter E. Boyer, instructor in English composition, will give the last lecture on "Sacramental Meeting of Affection" on March 10.

Murray, the first lecturer, is a native of Columbus, Ohio and was graduated from the Ohio State University where he received a bachelor of arts degree, a bachelor of science degree in education, a master of arts degree and a doctor of philosophy degree.

He is a member of Phi Eta Sigma, Phi Alpha Theta, Phi Beta Kappa and Omicron Delta Kappa honorary societies.

He has served as secretary of the Pennsylvania Historical Association for five years and also belongs to the Mississippi Valley Historical Association, the Ohio History Society and the American Historical Association.

Before coming to the University in 1949, Murray taught at Ohio State.

At the University Murray was a founder of the Fraternity Marketing Association and is currently serving on the board of the University Christian Association.
