

SHIMAT PURAGRA PARAMPANTHI
All living things contain the "same vital part which is in the heart of every creation."

Monk Sees Life As Divine Cycle

By CAROL BLAKESLEE

The human personality stems from a divine reality and strives continually to return to this divinity, said Srimat Puragra Parampanthi, a Hindu monk, last night.

Speaking on "Hinduism in the Modern World," Parampanthi said the Hindu view of life is divided into two periods, based on the concept of a divine ultimate reality.

Yale Professor Will Present Physics Talks

Dr. Henry Margenau, professor of physics and natural philosophy at Yale University, will present three lectures next week.

Margenau, who has been named distinguished visiting professor in physical and engineering sciences, will speak on "Cultural and Philosophical Perspectives of Modern Physics," at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, in 121 Sparks.

He also will present a series of two lectures on the same subject, at 5:15 p.m. Wednesday and Friday, both in 119 Osmond. The afternoon series is intended primarily for faculty, upperclassmen and graduate students.

Other lectures by Margenau have been scheduled for March 18 to 24 and April 22 to 25.

Margenau was born in Germany and came to the United States in 1923. He holds a bachelor of arts degree from Midland College, a master of science degree from the University of Nebraska, and a doctor of philosophy degree from Yale.

He joined the staff of Yale University in 1929 and has been the Eugene Higgins Professor of Physics and Philosophy since 1950.

Margenau has been a member of the Institute of Advanced Study at Princeton and of the Radiation Laboratory at Cambridge. He has been a consultant of the Atomic Energy Commission, Argonne National Laboratory and the National Bureau of Standards.

He has been associate editor of the Review of Natural Science, and of the American Journal of Science. He is the author of numerous articles in technical journals and several books in the fields of physics and mathematics.

The first phase is a period of self-possession in which the personality develops itself spiritually. This spiritual development occurs simultaneously with the attainment of material goods. "The Hindus are practical people," Parampanthi said.

The second phase, later in life, is a period of self-renunciation with a gradual process of getting rid of some of the material things that had seemed necessary in youth.

Hinduism is based on a harmony between the soul and spiritual needs with physical and material desires, he said.

The Hindu mind, however, is not satisfied solely with material things, Parampanthi stressed, but rather with a union of spiritual and material.

A basic concept of the Hindu religion, Parampanthi said, is that all living things, whether they be humans or animals, contain the "same vital part which is in the heart of every creation."

"The essence in man is the essence in all living things," he said.

The Hindus believe that everything is created by one God and therefore that everything in the world has "its place in the scheme," Parampanthi said. Further, he said, the Hindus feel that all things in the world are enjoyable and that man has a duty for a "God illumination" or a return to divinity.

Parampanthi is with the Vedanta Center of Boston and is on campus this week under the auspices of the Faculty Committee on Interreligious Studies.

The Vedanta centers serve as "reverse missions" in the United States to explain Hinduism, its ideals and beliefs.

Epstein Gets Jr. Board's Motto: Nomination 'Arise and Guide' For LA Head

By SUE HILL

Every Saturday morning, while the rest of the campus sleeps, a group of alert, ambitious students can be seen touring the campus.

These students are members of the Junior Class Advisory Board who have volunteered their services every Saturday morning from 9:30 a.m. to noon to guide prospective students and their parents on tours around the campus.

After the applicant has been interviewed in the dean of admissions' office, he and his family are taken on the tour, usually on foot, which covers the major areas of the campus, including the Library, Boucke Building, Beaver Field, Recreation Hall, a visit to a student's room in either a men's or women's residence hall and a stop at the Dairy Building for some Penn State ice cream. Also included in the tour is a visit to the building which houses the prospective student's major.

If a visitor should desire a campus tour during the week, the dean of admissions' secretary merely refers to a schedule of students who are on call to lead tours at that particular time.

The tour, which was first discussed last semester by the Junior Class Advisory Board, was initiated two weeks ago.

The idea was presented to Dr. Sherman Stanford, associate dean of admissions, by Steven Ott, junior in labor-management relations from Westfield, N. J., chairman of the tour plan. He was assisted by Kay Rarig, junior in home economics from Lewistown.

Stanford, who spoke highly of the tour, said that it is the first cooperative effort of a group of students to organize such a program which has been successful.

TV Show to Discuss Father's Role in Family

The role of the father in a changing family will be discussed in a program originating from the campus at 9:50 a.m. today.

This is the second in a series of three shows for the program "Penn State—Its Men and Ideas." Dr. Winona L. Morgan, professor of child development and family relations, presides.

David Epstein, now vice president of Liberal Arts Student Council, was nominated for the council presidency in preliminary nominations last night.

Joyce Basch, corresponding secretary, and Barbara Beamer, sixth semester representative, were nominated for the office of recording secretary.

No nominations were made for the offices of vice president, corresponding secretary and treasurer.

Final nominations and elections will be held March 10.

The council voted to drop plans for a "career day" after hearing a report by Epstein, who is career day chairman.

Epstein said the project would conflict with the Career Carnival, scheduled for April 14 through 16, which is being sponsored by the Inter-College Council Board. Epstein said Donald Cook, assistant director of the Placement Service, had advised him of the conflict. Cook, according to Epstein, said displays of interest to liberal arts students would be included in the Career Carnival.

Barbara Beamer, evaluation committee chairman, reported that a survey is being made of all colleges in the University. A revised book list is presently being compiled and will be completed in the near future.

President Louis Philips appointed Robert Jublerer, senior from Hollidaysburg, chairman of the elections committee in charge of the election of new members to the council.

Plans were also discussed concerning a get-together between the council and the Liberal Arts faculty.

Sunshine, Mildness Will Prevail Today

Today will be one of the most pleasant days of this winter with abundant sunshine, light winds and relatively mild temperatures.

Rather mild air, which originated over the Pacific Ocean, has replaced the cold arctic air that had dominated the eastern two-thirds of the nation for most of the winter. By late tomorrow, however, the return of moisture to this area will set the stage for rain or snow on Friday. The forecast is for rapid warming this afternoon after a chilly morning, with a high of 46 degrees. Clear and cool tonight with a low of 27 degrees. Partly cloudy and continued mild tomorrow.

UCA Sponsors Panel On 'Great Decisions'

The first of a series of panel discussions on "Great Decisions," sponsored by the University Christian Association, will be held at 7:30 tonight in the Chapel lounge.

The topic will be "U.S. Foreign Economic Policy." The panel will consist of four economics professors, Dr. Marvin Rozen, Dr. Arthur H. Reede, Dr. Will E. Mason and Dr. Jan Prybyla. Dr. Monroe Newman will be moderator.

Recent Books Give Mention To University

The University figures in a number of ways in several recent books, according to the column, "Bookworm," by W. L. Werner '29 which appeared in the January issue of The Penn State Alumni News.

The best selling book which mentions the University is John O'Hara's "From the Terrace." Two imaginary alumni, Tom Rothermal and a minor character, Lawrence Von Elm, a genius at designing airplanes, are included.

Tom is a self-made man, running errands and doing odd jobs from the age of eleven in his Schuylkill County town. Family troubles almost make him drop out of the University, where his (documented) expenses total up to $230 a year for fees, board and room! But he borrows and graduates in Liberal Arts in 1919, keeping one foot in Wall Street through his market speculations.

Recipient of a 1958 Distinguished Alumnus Award, Charles H. Fetter, a 1917 graduate in electrical engineering, is treated in a chapter of "Operation Success" by Quentin Reynolds and W. S. Rowe, a book based on Reynolds' television program of the same name. Fetter had to work his way through college, but still found time for track, the Daily Collegian and Froth. His hard work finally led him to ownership of American Time Products, Inc., in 1937.

Theodore Roethke, former teacher of verse writing and also tennis coach at the University, has published a volume of his collected poems "Words for the Wind." John A. Allgard, class of 1920, has issued a volume of his poems, "Gypsying in Verse."
