CLASS OF '63 rooms are being prepared, the floors are almost tiled, the furniture is being placed, and according to the admissions office, the students are ready to fill them. The halls are scheduled for completion in the fall.

North Halls to Open—

Aluminum work on the dorms is also about completed, according to Charles Levine, foreman of the metal company which has the contract for all aluminum panels on the buildings.

Levine said it is now mostly a matter of waiting until other jobs have been finished before finishing up the metal work.

In addition to desks and beds each room will have a loud speaker, two closets, two bookshelves, two bulletin boards and two lockers. Four-overhead lights have also been put in each room for lighting.

Each building will have six single and 148 double rooms. Rooms for hall counselors will be placed in the basement of each building near the recreation center.

According to the Department of Housing, the four halls which will be collectively known as North Halls, will be individually named Beam, Leete, Holmes and Rinkle Halls.

Graduate Bridge Club

The Graduate Student Association Bridge Club will meet at 7 p.m. Sunday in the Hetzel Union cardroom.

ADS to Hold 3 TV Sessions At University

A Television Institute will be presented in three sessions at the University by Alpha Delta Sigma, professional advertising fraternity in cooperation with the School of Journalism and Station WFBG-TV, Altoona.

The sessions, which will be open to the public, will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. on March 4, 11 and 18.

Frank B. Palmer, general manager of Station WFBG-TV, will be in charge of the program material and will conduct the March 4 session, covering topics such as TV management, advertising and careers in television.

On March 11, Robert E. Miller, sales manager for the Altoona station, will discuss "The Business of Getting Business," emphasizing local, national and network fields of selling television time.

William Mulvey, program director of WFBG-TV, at the March 18 session will explore TV programming, talking on the selection of programs, ratings and TV audience research.

2.4 All-U Needed For WRA Offices

Because of a revision in the constitution, applicants for offices in the Women's Recreation Association need only a 2.4 All-University average instead of a 2.5 as previously required.

Applications will be available at the Hetzel Union desk until Friday for the following offices, with required semester standing listed: president, senior; vice president, junior; secretary, sophomore; intramural chairman, junior; two assistant intramural chairmen, sophomores; and a sophomore representative.

Players to Present 'Theater Omnibus'

The entire cast for the next Players production, "Theatre Omnibus", will consist of the Arts Company, a group of six graduate students, and Hisako Matsubara, a graduate student in theatre arts from Kyoto, Japan.

This is the first time the Arts Company has performed as a group in a Players production.

"Theatre Omnibus," to be given March 6 through March 21, weekends only, is styled after the popular TV program, "Omnibus." The play consists of scenes from some of the most popular American, European and Japanese plays and will include three folk dances by Miss Matsubara.

The presentation will include scenes from "A Streetcar Named Desire," "Life With Father," "Teahouse of the August Moon," "Light Up The Sky," "Oedipus the King," "The Time of Your Life" and "Aria Da Capo."

This year the Arts Company has presented scenes from classic and modern theater to illustrate lectures for classes in arts I and II.

The members of the company are: June McCurdy, Mary Minkewich, Patricia Thompson, David McGirr, Donald Peterson and Gardner Tillson.

Dr. Walter H. Walters, of the theatre arts department, will act as host and master of ceremonies for the production.

Crew heads include: Nancy Blackman, advertising; Sally Murphy, costumes; Dean Egure, lighting; Ned Thomas, sound; Carol Coes, make-up; Robert Green, properties; Linda Ackley and Eleanor Daniels, construction; and William Roberts, house.

Tickets will go on sale March 2 at the Hetzel Union desk.

Leonides Forms Available at HUB

Application blanks for self-nomination to Leonides offices of president, vice president, corresponding secretary, and recording secretary are now available at the Hetzel Union desk.

Nominees for president must have at least one semester's experience on Leonides Council and an All-University average of at least a 2.4. All other nominees must have at least a 2.2-All-University average.

All applications must be returned to the HUB desk by 5 p.m., next Wednesday. Elections will be held simultaneously with WSGA and WRA elections on March 12 in women's residence halls and dining areas.

Club Hubanna

Illingsworth Smurdley was not the dumbest guy in the world, but he was not the smartest, either. Illingsworth had been something of a big shot at Belchersville High—vice president of the Pin Feathers Club, assistant manager of the quoits team, runner-up for Face-of-the-Year. People thought he had promise.

When he came to Penn State, however, Smurdley fell in with the wrong crowd. He took to retrieving gum wads from under the tables in the Snack Bar, going to bed with his high tops on, and painting mustaches on the art works in the halls of the Temporary Building. Smurdley was also a rather loud-mouthed exponent of the belief that no guy at Penn State can get a date with a coed (that's a woman student at the Pennsylvania State University) unless he belongs to a fraternity.

Illingsworth's roommate, a rather quiet kid from Grass Flats, Pa., disagreed with Smurdley about the no-date business. One day he said to Smurdley, "I'll tell you what I'll do, Smurd." (He called him Smurd as a shortened form of Smurdley) "I'll get a date this weekend just to show you that a nonfraternity man can do so."

"Be my guest," smirked Smurdley, confident in his nauseous way that his roommate, a confirmed nonfraternity man, could never secure the companionship of a young lady at the Pennsylvania State University.

That night, Smurdley's roommate called up a svelte sweetie who sat next to him in Tobacco Shredding 66—a TV course.

"I should very much like to enjoy your companionship on Saturday night, February 28," he said.

"Why," the svelte sweetie demurred—all coeds at Penn State MUST demur when they are first called—"Just what did you have in mind?"

"Have in mind!" chortled Smurdley's roommate in his most contagious chortling manner. "There is just ONE thing to do this Saturday night—dance to the CAMPUSEERS at the CLUB HUBANNA."

"Oh-h-h-h," the svelte sweetie cooed. "You are a doll, a living, breathing, fun-loving doll. OF COURSE I'll go to the Club Hubana to dance to the CAMPUSEERS. It's SO SWEET of you to ask me. All the girls in my dorm are dying to be asked to Club Hubana."

Illingsworth? He spent the evening trying to read the great names on the top of Sparks Building—backwards.
