University Lobbys For Appropriations

By BILL JAFFE

Representatives of the University have contacted over half the members of the State Legislature to gain support of the University's additional appropriation requests.

President Eric A. Walker said he will go before the Senate and House appropriation committees when he is called and will explain "truthfully and honestly" why the University needs more than $34 million to operate during the 1959-61 biennium.

"I plan to tell them our story without pleading or scolding," Walker said in an interview with The Daily Collegian. Applying pressure is not good and the University prefers presenting its case in logical manner, he said.

Walker said he had no idea of when he would be called to present the University's case before the appropriation committee. House Majority Leader Stephen McCann had previously told The Daily Collegian that it would probably be early April before the hearings are started.

The University requested a $44 million appropriation from the state but Gov. David L. Lawrence cut the budget request $10 million in his budget message to the legislature last Monday.

"We plan to admit the same number of freshmen in the fall as we did last fall," Walker said. The proposed 4000 additional main campus students would be admitted in the fall of 1960 if more money is gained from the legislature.

Walker had proposed to increase the University enrollment by 5600 students during the next biennium at an estimated cost of $6.3 million. The amount of money received from the state will have a direct bearing on the number of students admitted in 1960, he said.

The new residence halls will be filled with graduate and special students, he said, until the enrollment is increased. "The University's admission applications are running about 30 per cent higher than last year as Penn State continues to become a more popular University to attend," Walker said.

"Penn State is big and good," he said, and "its reputation has improved greatly in the last five years." It is a resident institution and more students are preferring resident instruction than part-time and "commuting" instruction, Walker said.

Parents can be and are proud to send their sons and daughters to our University, the president said.

Walker proposed a system of Commonwealth College Campuses at the January meeting of the Board of Trustees but said that Gov. Lawrence is waiting for guidance and re-

Ed Council Will Hold Elections

The Education Student Council will hold elections for representatives under its present constitution because revisions on a new one are still in committee.

Dorothy Newman, council president, said the council did not want to rush the new proposals through just to have them ready for the March 18 and 19 elections.

One representative for every 50 students in the College of Education will be elected.

Major revisions to the council's constitution include changes in the length of terms for representatives, and discussion of selection methods for council scholarships.

Applications for next week's election are at the Hetzel Union desk. Students must have a 2.4 All-University average and submit one wallet-size picture with the application blank. Candidate screening will be held this Sunday in the HUB. Eligible students will be contacted personally for screening appointments.

In other action at last night's council meeting, Sharon Hoffman, coffee hour chairman, said the council's monthly coffee hour will be at 4 p.m. next Thursday in Dining Room C of the HUB. John R. Rackley, dean of the college, will be the speaker.

The council voted to hold its annual banquet on May 19. Further plans will be announced at the March 24 meeting of the council.

Choir Leaders To Talk Bach

"The Musical Language of Johann Sebastian Bach" will be discussed at the vesper services of worship at 4:15 p.m. today in the Helen Eakin Eisenhower Chapel.

Willa Taylor and James W. Beach, directors of the Chapel choirs, will lead the discussion.

Charles E. Minneman, assistant University chaplain, will lead a short service of worship before the discussion.

'Annie' Crew Toils To Finish Scenery

By BARBARA LANEY

Spread out over the floor and against every wall in the dim, low-ceilinged, dusty Schwab basement, an ambitious crew of scenic artists are busy using sponges, sticks and brushes while they wonder if they will ever finish the scenery for "Annie, Get Your Gun," which opens tonight.

Frosh Faints Taking Shower

John Hart, freshman in meteorology from Waynesburg, was admitted to the Ritenour Health Center shortly before 5 p.m. yesterday after he fainted while taking a shower at Recreation Hall.

Herbert R. Glenn, University physician, said Hart was responding to treatment and "seems to be doing okay."

It was rumored, he said, that Hart had practiced hyperventilation, a form of self-induced fainting, before he passed out, but he stressed that these rumors were unconfirmed.

Hart was taken to the health center in the University ambulance

Everyone is confident they will be finished, however.

Since there isn't room on the floor, the art director hangs from a pipe trying to sketch in the big flats, while a member of the construction crew stares in amazement at the only completed flat. He has accidentally just poked a board through it.

Another poor girl is staring practically bug-eyed at the flat of woodwork she is painting. It seems that she has been painting the same thing for the last three weeks and it has almost become an obsession with her. She goes to bed at night and all she dreams about is woodwork patterns.

Everytime she walks into a room, the first thing she notices is the woodwork. They plan to put her on the Buffalo Bill scene tomorrow in hopes of turning her dreams in a better direction.

A problem which constantly confronts the crew is the glue. Someone has to come in two hours early each night to cook it before it can be mixed with the paint pigments and then, it seems to stick to everybody and everything, except the flats. One girl was glued to a can for forty-five minutes last week.

However, through what appears to be the epitome of confusion, the scenery and construction crew is trying hard to do their part in making "Annie, Get Your Gun" one of the best musicals seen at the University in a long time.

Heavy Snow Due--

state before tomorrow afternoon. Even by then only minor improvement is expected.

The forecast is for snow this morning, gradually tapering off and ending this afternoon, with an accumulation of 9 to 12 inches. Strong winds and below freezing temperatures will continue all day. Tonight will be partly cloudy, windy and continued cold. Temperatures will remain around 30 degrees today and then fall into the low 20's tonight. Sunny weather will return tomorrow, but continued cold temperatures will prevent melting of the snow.

Cloudy weather with a chance of more snow is likely on Saturday.
