Tough Negotiations Attitude on Berlin Seen as Ike's Aim

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower was reported last night to be advocating a tough negotiating attitude toward Russia as the best way to solve the Berlin crisis while promoting German unity.

This word on the White House attitude circulated as Eisenhower prepared for the arrival today of British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan. They will have a 4-day round of talks aimed at coordinating Western strategy.

Top administration officials were cheered by Macmillan's statement in Ottawa about a need "to combine firm principles with readiness to negotiate."

This Macmillan view coincided with Eisenhower's expressed determination to stand firm in Western Berlin until the Soviets offer major concessions toward the goal of German unity.

Despite Macmillan's words, some suspicion persisted that the British leader might try to press Eisenhower too hard and too fast, in the administration opinion, along a path of meeting Soviet views.

Macmillan was viewed as putting more emphasis on the value of summit talks with Russia's Premier Nikita Khrushchev than Eisenhower thinks developments warrant.

Eisenhower expressed readiness to attend such a top level parley this summer—provided developments justified a promise of success.

In advance of Macmillan's arrival, officials stressed that Eisenhower wanted some advance signs of Soviet readiness to make concessions—not a crisis conference full of propaganda charges.

Macmillan, however, was understood to favor a summit meeting even if foreign ministers failed to ease East-West differences in advance. A meeting under such circumstances might be the only way to avoid a shooting war over Berlin, British informants said.

Walker to Address AJC in Philadelphia Today

President Eric A. Walker will speak on "Pennsylvania's System of Commonwealth Campuses" at a meeting of the Public Education Institute of the Women's Division of the American Jewish Congress today in Philadelphia.

The University offered its 14 off-campus centers to the state as the nucleus of a system.

Professors Enter Local Elections

Seventeen professors have filed petitions to run for Centre County, borough or township offices in the May 19 Primary Elections.

A total of 317 candidates from Centre County are running.

Lynne S. Hoffman, associate professor of English composition (Dem.); Harold P. Zelko, professor of speech (Dem.); Jefferson D. Beard, instructor in engineering drawing (Dem.); Arnold Addison, associate professor of engineering research (Rep.); and Allen L. Baker, professor emeritus of agriculture extension (Rep.) are running for Borough Council.

Robert D. Scheirer, professor of civil engineering (Dem.), and Harold L. Dillenbeck, instructor in engineering drawing (Rep.), are running for county surveyor.

Candidates for borough school director are: J. W. Crane Remaley, professor of education (Rep.) and Philip S. Skell, associate professor of chemistry (Rep.).

Leonard A. Doggett, professor emeritus of electrical engineering (Dem.), is running for borough assessor.

Lyman C. Hunt, Jr., associate professor of education (Dem.); John R. Hayes, associate professor of chemistry (Rep.); and William J. Page, assistant professor of education (Rep.) are running for College Township school director.

In Ferguson Township Robert H. Lauck, administrative assistant to the Dean of the College of Agriculture (Dem.), is a candidate for auditor and John P. Devereaux, assistant professor of accounting (Rep.), is a candidate for justice of the peace.

C. Marshall Ritter, associate professor of pomology (Dem.), is running for school director of Harris Township. William O. Rogers, Jr., associate professor of mathematics (Rep.), is running for supervisor of Patton Township.

Warmer Winds To Bring Relief

Put away your winter coats—warmer weather is on the way. A major change in the upper air flow will result in the movement of much warmer air into Pennsylvania today and tomorrow.

Today's temperatures will be almost 15 degrees higher than yesterday's as warm southwesterly winds replace the piercing northerly winds of the past few days.

Today's prediction promises sunny skies and rapidly rising temperatures after a rather chilly early morning. Fair weather with temperatures considerably higher than last night is tonight's outlook. Today's high of 50 degrees will be followed by a low of 30 degrees tonight.

Cabinet to Discuss New Judicial Plan

All-University Cabinet tonight will hear the proposed plan for judicial reorganization and Cabinet's final approval of the reorganization constitution will be sought.

Cabinet will meet at 7 p.m. in 203 Hetzel Union.

Ronald Siders, chairman of judicial reorganization, will present his committee's report, which is included as one of

Blanks Available For Draft Test

Applications for the Selective Service College Qualification Test are available in the dean of men's office.

Applications for the test must be completed and mailed to the Selective Service Section of the Educational Testing Service by Thursday, April 9.

To be eligible to take the test an applicant must be a registrant who intends to request occupational deferment as a student; must be satisfactorily pursuing a full-time college course leading to a degree; and must not previously have taken the test.

The test will be given Thursday, April 30 on campus.

the articles in the constitution. If the plan is approved by Cabinet it will be presented for final approval at the first meeting following spring recess. At that time student government reorganization will go into effect, if Cabinet approves the plan.

The bylaws to the constitution also will be presented for the first of two times. These bylaws include the elections system, elections code, rules committee, freshman customs, college councils and provisions for amendments to the bylaws.

Siders will ask Cabinet to approve a judicial system consisting of a supreme court and 12 district courts having jurisdiction over different phases of student life. All judicial powers of the Athletic Aid Increase 'Not Necessary'

By LOU PRATO, Sports Editor
Seventh of a Series
On Education and Athletics

Although an increase in athletic scholarships would be desirable for Penn State's athletic program, such an increase is not necessary, according to the view shared by University Athletic Director Ernest B. McCoy and President Eric A. Walker.

"I think we have a very healthy and well-balanced program," McCoy told the Collegian in a recent interview. "We support 11 varsity sports and there are many schools that don't have half that many."

"It would be nice to have championship teams in every sport," McCoy said, "but that's almost an impossibility today without leading to overemphasis."

"We hope to increase our grants-in-aid by 25 for a four year period in the near future," the grey-haired athletic director added, "but we don't want to start getting aid for athletes out of proportion to the aid for academic scholarships."

"The minute you start to increase over and beyond reason, you begin to have overemphasis. Besides, if you start getting aid for athletes out of proportion, you no longer have an educational institution, and education is our primary objective—not athletics."

Walker coincides with McCoy on the standard of the present athletic setup. "I am quite happy with Penn State's varsity athletic program," Walker said. "I think our teams always make a good showing. We've never had what you call a disastrous year since I've been around here—and that's been 14 years now."

The University's chief administrator said he didn't know whether grants-in-aid would be increased in the future, but added "it depends on how much we can afford."

"I know there are many people who want to increase aid," Walker continued, "but no one has felt strong enough to request aid. If they did, I'd certainly look into it."

Walker indicated, however, that financial aid to athletes would "pick up considerably in the next 10 years." He added that he would also like to see Penn State build up a national reputation in all sports but not to the extent

WMAJ To Be Asked For Contract

By DENNY MALICK
WDFM probably will not get AM facilities, according to Lawrence E. Dennis, vice president for academic affairs.

Dennis said yesterday that University officials have reason to believe that "contractual arrangements suitable to the needs of the instructional program in journalism and communications" can be made with Radio Station WMAJ.

Negotiations are now being made for a possible long term contract with WMAJ, he said, and "some sort of an agreement should be made in about a month."

Such an agreement with WMAJ, Dennis said, probably would involve having that station help improve facilities on campus and would also include expanded use of the downtown studios by students.

"We would certainly like to begin this program by September," Dennis added.

In making this statement, Dennis disclosed action at the Jan. 24 Board of Trustees meeting at which the 1958 Senior Class gift was accepted "with reservations."

The class had voted its $10,000 gift to go for AM facilities for the campus station.

However, in accepting the gift, the trustees added the stipulation that if instructional needs could be met through contract with a private station, "the funds involved are to be allocated to the College of the Liberal Arts to further the training of students in the mass communications media."

Dennis said this was not announced earlier because he had to inform Thomas Hollander, 1958 Senior Class president, of the action.

In the letter to Hollander, Dennis said he inquired whether the trustee action came within the general purposes of the gift as voted by class.

In his reply which was received this week, Hollander said he did not feel he should make this decision without consulting class members.

However, he added: "I feel that I am speaking for the class in saying that the action taken by the committee (trustees) . . . is quite acceptable."

The letter continued: "I feel, short of AM facilities for WDFM, the committee's plan to negotiate for suitable arrangements to fit the needs of the com-

Traveler Only Wanted Sleep And Taxi Ride

By JIM MORAN
George S. Bullock, 55, wandered down S. Allen St. yesterday morning with one thing on his mind—sleep.

He mounted the steps of Phi Mu Delta fraternity, entered the front room and flopped on a sofa. When aroused by the puzzled fraternity members he became unruly, and the police were summoned.

They booked Bullock on a charge of disorderly conduct and admitted him to a cell to "sleep it off" and to await a hearing before Justice of the Peace William P. Bell, police said.

Bell found Bullock guilty of disorderly conduct and fined him the minimum of $2. Bullock had no money. A classmate of Bullock at Susquehanna College in Selinsgrove, where Bullock was graduated, paid the fine. The man, now a prominent State College citizen, preferred to remain anonymous.

After the hearing Bullock went his way—in a taxi. Police were again summoned at 3:45 p.m. by a cab driver who complained that
