

British Actor Will Perform

Student tickets for the performance by Emyln Williams, 15th in the current Artists' Series, will be available at 1 p.m. Tuesday at the Hetzel Union desk.

Williams will perform his own creation, "A Boy Growing Up," based on the life and works of writer Dylan Thomas at 8:30 p.m. next Saturday in Schwab Auditorium.

Creamery Will Stop Deliveries

The University Creamery will discontinue service to some 800 retail route customers during the summer.

Dr. Donald V. Josephson, head of the Department of Dairy Science, said the creamery has sufficient volume on campus to support the needs of both teaching and research in the dairy science department.

The creamery supplies all the dairy products for the University's food service department and the Hetzel Union Building. It was founded before 1900 and has served retail outlets since that time.

The three retail routes in the State College borough were served three times weekly by University trucks. Only milk and other fluid products were sold to customers on the route.

Dr. Lyman E. Jackson, dean of the College of Agriculture, said each customer will be informed individually of the cut-off date "approximately one month before the route distribution is discontinued."

The University had for many years planned to discontinue the retail route as soon as the campus demand for its products was sufficient to absorb the volume necessitated by the program in dairy technology, Jackson said.

A new and enlarged University Creamery salesroom will make available all products, including milk in paper containers, for those who wish to continue the purchase of creamery products, he said.

The milk will sell at Milk Control Commission store price.

Czechoslovakia Topic Of Econ Prof's Article

An article written by Dr. Václav E. Mares, associate professor of economics, appears in the April issue of "Current History."

Mare's article, "Czechoslovakia: Moscow's Model State," is an analysis of Czechoslovakia's economy and foreign economic policy in the post-Stalin era.

2000 Reported for Traffic Violations

More than 2000 students felt the long arm of the campus law last semester when they were reported for traffic violations.

In former years most of these cases would have been brought before Traffic Court. However, since the adoption of a policy which charges court costs to all violators found guilty by the court, about 90 per cent of fines are paid without court proceedings.

The new policy, approved by Cabinet last spring, provides that persons given tickets by the Campus Patrol, report to Captain Phillip A. Mark in the Traffic Violations office in the Hetzel Union Building instead of to the Campus Patrol. Mark screens the cases and can impose penalties, dismiss or suspend them.

All violators have the option of taking their case to court, but since court costs of $1.00 are charged to those found guilty most fines are paid immediately according to Douglas Smith chairman of the court.

Statistics compiled by Mark show that last semester 2280 students reported to his office, but only 62, or approximately 3 per cent, were referred to the Traffic Court.

A total of $3520 was collected in fines. Court members find that there is a greater tendency to come before court after two violations since fines increase with each report.

Court members are now appointed by All-University Cabinet and under the proposed Student Government Association will be a part of the judicial system.

Two cases were dismissed, one suspended, one found guilty and one found not guilty in the Traffic Court meeting this week. One

Bond Sale Aids Dorm Construction

The University has announced the sale of its third issue of first mortgage bonds to aid in the construction of residence and dining hall facilities.

The bonds totaled $11 million. McKay Donkin, vice president for finance, said the interest costs on this sale were 3.88 per cent. He also said that the sale brought the total value of bonds outstanding to $45.6 million.

To complete the construction authorized under the financing program approved in 1957 by the Board of Trustees, a final $10 million will be required by the end of the year.

The final amount will be obtained by selling bonds bearing 3 per cent interest to the Federal government. He said that he would prefer to sell all the bonds to the government at 3 per cent but that only $10 million was possible under the terms of the Federal College Housing Program.

"Funds made available to the University through the sale of bonds can be used only for self-liquidating projects," Donkin said. No Commonwealth money can be used for such projects nor can the money raised by the sale of bonds be used for any but the stated purposes, he said.

The University bonds are held by large investment institutions, insurance companies and banks all over the country, as well as by many individual investors.

The average interest costs on all bonds issued to date is about 3.83 per cent, Donkin said. The General State Authority constructs only academic buildings, Donkin said, and without bond sales the University would be unable to finance construction of residence and dining halls.

Paper, Talk Win Prize for Junior

Grant C. Riddle, junior in electrical engineering from State College, was the winner in a competition at a student conference in Pittsburgh last week.

In a written and oral presentation, Riddle was judged superior to contestants from the University of Pittsburgh, Carnegie Institute of Technology and the University of West Virginia.

The subject of his prize paper was, "A New Color Television Camera System." President Eric A. Walker spoke at the dinner at which Riddle's victory was announced.

Riddle will attend the AIEE District Two conference and competition at the University of Delaware May 1 and 2. Twenty-one schools have been invited to attend the conference.

Starting with an introduction of the late poet and writer, Williams will show episodes out of the life and works of Thomas.

The English actor first became interested in the works of Thomas in 1953. He took part in four memorial performances in memory of the poet-writer and then set about perfecting the performance.

It was a year before the performance was perfected enough to perform. Williams first presented "A Boy Growing Up" at the Bath Festival in England. It proved so successful that he was asked to open the season at the Globe Theatre in London. Last year it was brought to Broadway where it received excellent reviews.

Williams makes no attempt to impersonate Thomas, but has developed the plot of the performance out of the writer's stories.

The performance is divided into 12 parts. Williams starts with an introduction of Thomas and then moves to "Memories of Childhood." A section called "Cousin Gwilym" follows.

"Who Do You Wish Was With Us?" and "The Outing" conclude the first part of the performance.

During the second portion Williams will perform: "The Hand," "Reminiscences of a Schoolmaster," "The Fight" and "Just Like Little Dogs."

The final segment of the show includes a "Self-Portrait," "Adventures in the Skin Trade" and "A Note to Close On."

The scenes are all taken from works of Thomas. They include: "Quite Early One Morning," stories from "Portrait of the Artist as a Young Dog," "A Prospect of the Sea," "Return Journey" and "Fantasy."

Reorganization Man To Make 2d Try

The reorganization committee will attempt once more to explain the new Student Government Association system to students at an open meeting Monday night.

The meeting, set for 7 p.m. in 213 Hetzel Union is the second attempt of the committee headed by Daniel Thalimer to explain the background and past actions of student government and the principles of the SGA plan.

Constitutions of the new system, to go before the students in a referendum April 21, 22 and 23, will be distributed to all who attend the meeting.

The committee will then answer any debatable points that the students question.

Thalimer expressed the hope that the meeting would have a large turnout. He also said he did "not think the poor turnout as evidenced at the first meeting last Wednesday was an indication that the student body knows all about the SGA plan."

Diagrams outlining the new system will be displayed early next week in the Hetzel Union Building and Waring Hall.

Thalimer has also received permission to have three different diagrams shown between television classes beginning Monday. Each diagram will run for two days, Thalimer explained.

Constitutions are still available at the Hetzel Union desk to students who wish to study the new system.

Problems Today Faced Officials 100 Years Ago

Some of the problems facing the University today were plaguing the administration 100 years ago when the first students arrived.

For instance, year 'round classes, now being discussed, were standard fare in 1859. Classes at the Farmer's High School, as the University was then known, ran from Feb. 16, 1859 to Dec. 12, 1859 without a vacation.

The first year students were here, only 69 of the 100 enrolled showed up for the start of school. Now the University admits more students than it can accommodate with some people living in bungalows and the hospital.

The University has done a complete about-face in the field of curriculum content in the past 100 years.

At that time the emphasis was placed on science with a conscious avoidance of the classics in order to give the students a more "practical" education.

A century later, President Eric A. Walker is seeking to strengthen the University's liberal arts program.
