3 Professors Named to Head New Education Departments

Three professors of education have been named to head the three new departments which will supplant the Department of Education in the College of Education, July 1.

The Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees made the appointments at its week end meeting.

Dr. Charles M. Long, professor and head of the Department of Education since 1950, will continue as head of the new Department of Elementary Education.

Dr. Franklin A. Miller, professor of education, will head the Department of Educational Services. He has served on the faculty since 1949.

Dr. James H. Moyer, professor of education and a member of the faculty since 1937, will direct the Department of Secondary Education.

All will continue to hold the rank of professor of education.

In January the Trustees approved the plan for reorganization of the Department of Education in what was described as a "step to increase efficiency of operation and make possible improved services to students."

Dr. John R. Rackley, dean of the College of Education, said that the steady rise of the number of undergraduates in the Department of Education, which reached 1400 this year, and the rapid growth of the graduate program virtually dictated the reorganization.

Long was graduated from Tarkio College in Tarkio, Mo. He received his master of arts and doctor of education degrees from the University of Colorado.

He taught in the public schools of his native Colorado for 15 years before receiving an appointment as assistant professor of education at Indiana University where he served three years before coming to the University.

Miller was born in Johnstown and attended the University of Pittsburgh where he received his bachelor of science, master of science and doctor of philosophy degrees. He served as a teacher and school administrator in Cambria County schools before joining the University of Pittsburgh faculty in 1948. He came here a year later.

Moyer was born in Hiawatha, Kan., and received his bachelor of science degree from Kansas State College. He received his master and doctor of education degrees from Columbia University Teachers College.

Before joining the Columbia faculty in 1934 Moyer was a science teacher and later, high school principal for eight years in Kansas.

Through the Looking Glass

with Gabbi

Though April showers may come your way. Say, this is the month of showers isn't it? I don't mean the kind you beat with umbrellas (although Ethel has these too, but I digress). The ones I mean are the April showers that precede June weddings. Let's see what Ethel has in the gift department for blushing brides-to-be.

In the knife department that is to say cutlery, not cut department. Ethel has every conceivable type of steak knife and carving set. One carving set in particular is quite interesting. It has a wooden, flame proof case with a self-sharpening device built into it. There is also special cutlery such as a birthday cake knife and a bride's knife. I couldn't quite figure out what the bride needs a knife for.

In the glassware and the woodenware department are many lovely gift ideas. Delicate glasses and sturdy wooden saled bowls and canape dishes make an interesting display. Don't overlook the fascinating vases which are both practical and decorative. In brilliant turquoise and deep yellow, these would add a final touch to an array of gifts. For a new look in dishware, be sure to see Carbone's glazed pottery in two-toned shades.

We can't overlook

our other (and dare I say bitter) halves, now can we girls? While browsing around Ethel's the other day, I came upon a very unusual set of bookends. They are blocks of simulated stone with a design in relief on the front. Handy they are, too. When not supporting books, they can be used to wake up sleepy roommates, to put roommates to sleep, etc., etc.

So long for now.
