

Expansion Plans Raise Questions In Budget Talks

The University's expansion plans pose one of the main problems in securing additional money from the State Legislature.

Sen. George B. Stevenson (R.-Clinton), chairman of the State budget committee, said yesterday that the University's expansion plans make it difficult to appraise the request for more money. According to the Associated Press, Stevenson said, however, that he did not think there was any fat in the University's proposed budget.

"It's just a matter of how far we can go," Stevenson told a newsman.

The University requested $43.9 million from Gov. David L. Lawrence but President Eric A. Walker's request was trimmed to $34.2 million by Lawrence in his budget message to the General Assembly March 4.

Walker told the budget committee hearing yesterday in Harrisburg that the University needs $4.3 million to increase its faculty and staff, and for new materials, building maintenance and new research programs.

Stevenson said it will be quite some time before any decision is made on the administration's requests.

He also questioned the "negligibility" of alumni contributions to the University, recalling that he had encouraged former President Milton S. Eisenhower to explore that source.

Walker said he was "very unhappy" with the amount of alumni contributions at the University. He said the school's alumni contributions were very low indeed compared with Harvard or Princeton.

"That's one of the things I don't understand," he said. "People at private institutions contribute heavily. Those at public colleges don't."

Walker told the committee that the University plans to enroll an additional 5600 students during the coming two years, noting that during the present biennium resident enrollment increased by 3834 students.

"My most urgent need is to raise faculty salaries to what they should be in line with faculty salaries at other colleges," Walker said. He said the University is losing good instructors to other colleges paying higher salaries.

Dr. Kittrell to Speak On 'Careers Overseas'

5 Junior Coeds Chosen Miss Penn State Finalists

Five coeds were chosen last night from among 33 interviewees as finalists in the Miss Penn State Contest.

There were almost as many male students waiting in the Old Main hall outside the interview room as there were nervous contestants for the University's biggest beauty title.

It resembled a hospital maternity ward; the paces slowed only by the effort needed to cut your way through the smoke from the cigarettes which eventually wound up in and overflowed the ashtrays.

Thirty-four interviews were originally scheduled. However, it was discovered that one of the contestants, Patti Greso, was an eighth semester student.

Each girl entered the interview room and a few minutes later emerged with a sigh and a smile. The five finalists were notified by phone after the interviews which lasted three-and-a-half hours.

The five finalists will lead the Spring Week Float Parade April 24 and will also participate in a motorcade to Recreation Hall for the coronation on April 29.

Dulles Quits Post Because of Illness

No Successor Named Yet

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—Cancer forced John Foster Dulles to resign yesterday as secretary of state.

A sad, moist-eyed President Eisenhower announced Dulles' decision at a dramatic news conference.

The vacationing President said he had not finally made up his mind regarding a successor to the 71-year-old Cabinet member. He promised to fill the post "as quickly as practicable." Reports continued both here and in Washington that Undersecretary Christian A. Herter, 64, is the most likely choice.

In a voice betraying his emotion, Eisenhower told a small group of newsmen that Dulles now is "incapacitated for carrying on the administrative load" of his office, "in addition to assisting in the making of policy."

Eisenhower said at the conference that the latest medical findings on Dulles' condition are not of the kind "that make him helpless." He announced he is keeping Dulles on as a consultant on foreign policy.

Eisenhower conferred with Dulles for 45 minutes there Monday and reportedly urged his good friend not to make any hasty decision.

The fact that Eisenhower did not immediately announce a successor caused some surprise. There had been widespread expectation he would promptly name Herter, who has been acting secretary since February.

Herter already has been picked to represent the United States at a Western foreign ministers' conference in Paris starting April 29.

Students Seek Careers

By NICKI WOLFORD

Approximately 25 students were watching the Associated Press' teletype machine at the Career Exposition yesterday when one of the biggest news stories of the month—John Foster Dulles' resignation came over the wire.

The bulletin came in shortly after 10 a.m. from Augusta, Ga., and the crowd increased to about 40 as they watched the rest of the story roll out of the machine.

Eng-Arch Picks Bowers

William Bowers, junior in industrial engineering from Broomall, was elected president of the Engineering-Architecture Student Council for the 1959-60 school term at a special meeting last night in 216 Willard.

He will replace former president-elect Gary Gentzler, junior in engineering science from York, who resigned after being elected president of the IFC.

The teletype machine along with displays from 34 other companies and associations attracted an estimated 7000 students to the All-University Career Exposition, according to Chairman Jack Kendall.

Kendall said a large number of the students were only looking at displays, but the response from students who were interested in talking about careers was very good.

Robert Schuldt, one of five representatives from the General Electric Corporation, said he and his associates had each talked to about 30 students interested in that field.

"I'm getting hoarse already and I do this for a living," he said. The representative for Joseph Horne and Company, Donald Coan, kept an hour by hour account of the number of students who visited the company display. The average number of students in the morning was 75 an hour and the average for the afternoon was 55, he said.

Harald Sandstrom, junior in arts and letters from Bryn Athyn, was elected president of the Association of Independent Men last night.

Sandstrom defeated Douglas Pollak, junior in psychology from Cresson.

The new president was a representative to the AIM Board of Governors from Town Independent Men Council this year. He will sit on the Student Government Association advisory cabinet.

Frank Pearson, junior in arts and letters from Ridley Park, was elected vice president. Pearson defeated John Dively, junior in arts and letters from Dickinson. Dively was then elected treasurer unopposed.

David Frick, junior in industrial engineering from Wilmington, Del., was elected secretary unopposed.

Retiring officers are Edward Frymoyer, presi-

The Board of Governors passed an amendment to the constitution providing for tribunals in each men's residence hall area, as specified in the judicial reorganization plan under consideration by Cabinet.

The installation of free local dialing from the residence halls to downtown extensions will add $20 to $25 to residence hall charges, Cohick reported. Free local dialing had been proposed at an AIM meeting earlier in the semester. Frymoyer suggested that one telephone for free local dialing be installed in each residence hall unit. This will be discussed with the administration.
