1959-Little International

Prize Horses to Be Attraction

The Wilson Six-Horse Hitch, descendants of knight-carrying Flemish horses of the middle ages, will be the featured attraction at the 1959 Little International Livestock Show.

The six horses, winners of the 1958 Chicago International Livestock Show for the 24th time in 39 years, will lead the pre-show parade next Friday night through campus and State College.

Riding horses and samples of the show animals will follow the team in the parade.

The 12,000 pound hitch will enter the stock pavilion, on Saturday April 25 for a demonstration. Each horse will be wearing a 110 pound harness, and together the six horses will draw a 4400 pound wagon, one of the original wagons used to deliver meat for the Chicago stockyards over a half century ago.

The parade of the Little International champions and the choosing of a grand champion—the main events of the Saturday show—will be a part of the afternoon program. Other events are a sheep shearing demonstration, a meat raffle and a sheepdog demonstration.

The preliminary judging will take place Saturday morning. Beginning at 8 a.m., beef cattle, sheep, swine and horses will be shown by almost 100 contestants.

Animals will be judged on showmanship and training. All animals are owned by the University and are loaned to the students for the show.

Over $600 worth of prizes will be awarded at the awards banquet at 6:30 p.m. Saturday in the HUB ballroom.

According to the show manager, William Harding, senior in animal husbandry from Brookville, this year's show will be the largest ever.

Career Show Called Success; May Become Annual Event

The first All-University Career Exposition was termed very successful in reaching its goal of informing students about career opportunities, according to student chairman Jack Kendall and Donald Cook, assistant director of the University Placement Service.

Kendall said students were introducing themselves to representatives and explaining their backgrounds just as it had been suggested they do.

The success of the exposition indicates that it should be repeated every year if possible, Cook said.

He interviewed all but three of the 95 representatives to determine if the students had asked questions pertaining to careers. All but one of the representatives interviewed felt that the students had been really interested in talking about careers and thought the exposition was a success.

The dissenting representative said his display was not oriented toward careers; and if he came again, he would bring a different display, according to Cook.

Cook said that in a future exposition a few more career fields should be represented. Some students were asking about certified public accountants who were not here, he said. Accountants were represented in industrial and business fields, he added.

A number of the company and association representatives said they would like to be invited back next year. This was the first time some of them had attended a career oriented exposition and they said they learned a lot themselves, according to Cook.

The exposition was sponsored by the Inter-College Council Board, the Alumni Association, and the Placement Service.

The expense of the exposition was shared by its three sponsors. Cook estimated the total cost of the exposition at about $1200.

The use of space and facilities of the Hetzel Union Building were provided for the exposition at cost and the members of Alpha Phi Omega, men's service fraternity helped to set up the exhibits.

Leonides Fashion Show To Feature 'Celebrities'

University "celebrities" will parade up and down the runways showing off the latest in campus finery when Leonides Council sponsors its annual fashion show at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Hetzel Union ballroom.

Under the theme "Big Weekend at Penn State in the Springtime," student sports personalities, campus politicians, beauty contest winners and representatives of independent men and women will show guests the proper weekend wardrobe for everything from the formal Friday dance to the sunny Sunday picnic.

"We will start with our Penn State student meeting his date at the station," Lynn Reidenbaugh, program chairman, said. "We will show the proper traveling clothes for 'imports' and the proper clothes to wear when meeting imports."

The 'weekend' will continue, Miss Reidenbaugh said, with a display of formal wear for the big dance on Friday and even, she hopes, a display of pajamas that would be appropriate for an import to wear during post-dance gab sessions.

The show will continue with a display of tennis clothes for a sunny Saturday afternoon, rain wear for a rainy Saturday afternoon and sports or casual clothes for Saturday evening.
