

Dial Telephones Set for August

A new dial telephone system which will replace the University's present centralized system will go into operation Sunday, Aug. 16.

The wiring and shelves for the new telephones have already been placed in the residence halls. Installation of the telephones will begin June 8. A new telephone building located north of Boucke building will house the new system.

According to Wilbur F. Diehl, manager of telephones in the department of maintenance and utilities, the changeover has been in the planning stage for several years.

The opening of the North Residence Halls, planned for September, made the change necessary at this time. Both the administrative switchboard in Willard building and the residence hall system in Simmons are now loaded to capacity.

The new system will have one telephone for every four rooms in the residence halls. Each student on campus will be assigned an individual telephone number beginning UNiversity 5- followed by four digits. This will enable calls to be placed in or out of the residence halls at any time of the day or night.

All campus offices will also have individual numbers, instead of an extension number. The use of these direct lines will eliminate the necessity for a University switchboard.

One exchange will serve all telephones on campus, eliminating clogging of the lines and greatly increasing the efficiency of equipment. At present, the administrative system carries the heavier load during the office hours, while the residence hall system is used to capacity during the evening hours.

The number of trunk lines serving the University will be increased to 143. This will improve service on calls to and from State College and on long distance calls.

Installation of this new system will allow the number of telephones to increase proportionately with the growth of the University. Since the present system was installed in 1950, the number of telephones has doubled. Even this increase did not provide enough telephones. For more than a year, University officials have had to deny requests for additional telephone lines to University offices.

Handbook Editorial Staff Will Meet Tonight at 7

The editorial staff of the Student Handbook will meet at 7 tonight in 214 Hetzel Union.

All persons accepted for the staff must attend. Assignments will be given out.

Administration, Faculty Attend 2-Day Seminar

Members of the faculty and administration—115 strong—have concluded a 2-day seminar on University problems at the Fort Bedford Inn.

The participants met in four sessions to discuss the University's internal communications, quality in performance, long range goals and other administrative problems.

Attending the meeting were department heads, deans and members of President Eric A. Walker's staff.

After dinner on both nights, the group heard talks from Dr. C Addison Hickman, dean of the College of General Studies at North Carolina State College and Dr. John Ivey, executive vice president of New York University.

Walker, who would not comment to any length, said "the opportunity to exchange ideas was in itself a valuable and worth-while experience." He said the administration planned to study the recorded minutes of the various discussion groups for ideas and guidelines in future programming.

Ritchey to Head IFC Purchasing

Robert Ritchey, Acacia, has been elected president of the Interfraternity Council Purchasing Association.

James Wolfinger, Sigma Phi Epsilon, was named vice president and James Reeves, Theta Xi, was elected secretary-treasurer.

"I believe we have just tapped the surface of the potential in purchases and services we can offer the fraternities," Ritchey said upon being elected.

At present 27 fraternities are active members of IFCPA and purchase goods through the program. However, all fraternities within the Interfraternity Council are eligible to become members of the IFCPA.

UCA to Sponsor Project At Potter County Camp

The University Christian Association will again sponsor a work project at the Potter County migrant workers camp the last two weeks in August.

About 10 or fifteen students are needed to help, according to Genevieve Dilts, associate director of the UCA. The work will include setting up recreation for the children, directing craftwork, conducting Bible schools and similar activities.

Migrant worker camps are located throughout Potter County. About 1300 adults and 110 children were there in 1958.

The workers, most of them from around Florida or the deep South, pick beans, potatoes and peas on the farms.

They work in northern Pennsylvania from late summer until about Labor Day.

Students who want to help with the UCA work project from Aug. 23 - Sept. 5 will have to pay their own expenses, including transportation from State College, room, board and insurance.

Miss Dilts said housing may be arranged this year, as in the past, with a family on vacation willing to lend their home. This would cut down on the amount each student would have to pay. She estimated that the total cost would be around $25.

Students will also have to pay for transportation to the various Potter County camps from their temporary home, which will probably be located near the center of the county.

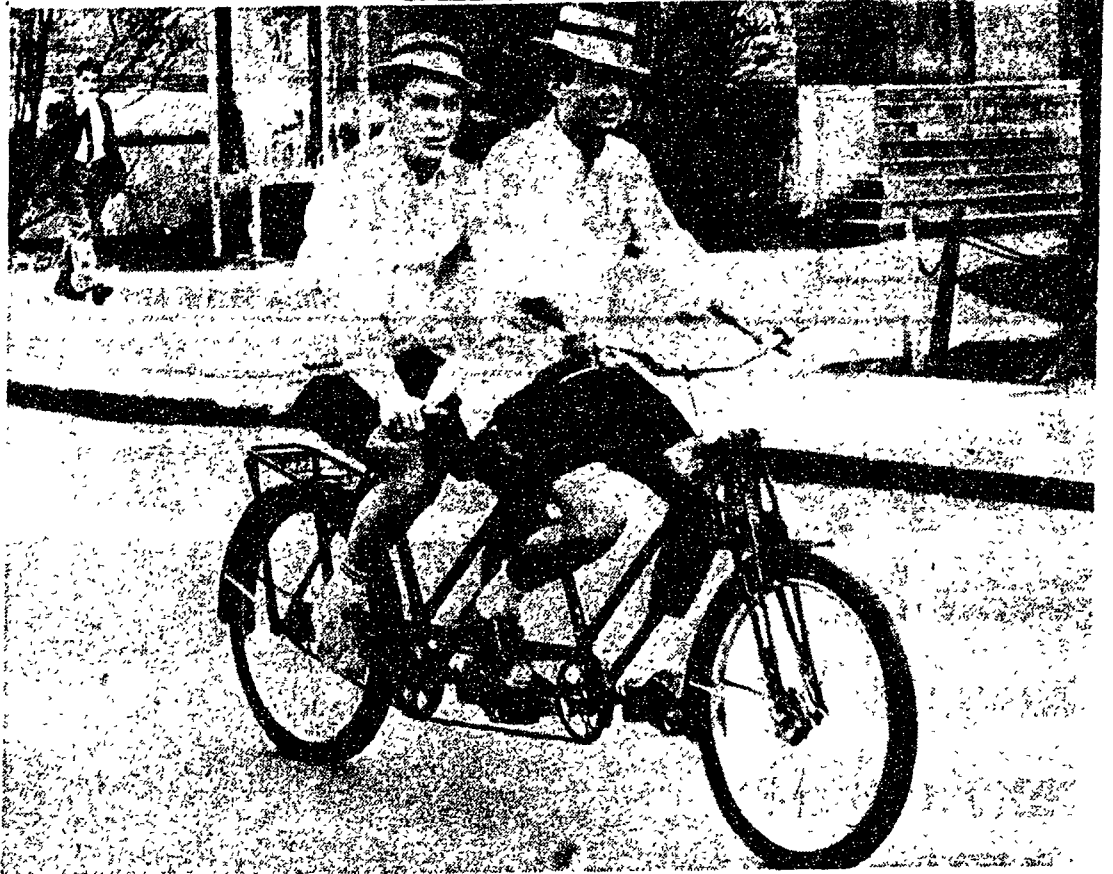

Further information may be obtained by calling Miss Dilts, Adams 8-8441, extension 541.

Several students are also needed to conduct a day care center for children while their mothers are working.

Dr. Winona Morgan, head of the Department of Child Development and Family Relations, said that elementary education or home economics majors are preferred. Students with experience in dealing with children are also eligible.

The center will be held from July 6 - Aug. 28.

For further information call Dr. Morgan Adams 8-8441, extension 2258.

Authorities Check On Purchasing Plan

By JIM STROTHMAN

The dean of men's office and two Better Business Bureaus are checking on the validity of the claims of a solicitor for a membership-type clothing plan.

Harold Kingston, a salesman and president of the Consumers Purchasers Agency, entered fraternities here last week and solicited members at $10 each.

One of the Better Business Bureaus was contacted by Alexander S. McGaughan, a junior in business administration from Bethesda, Md., after his fraternity, Phi Delta Theta, became skeptical.

The Bureau said, according to McGaughan, that the company has only been in existence for three months and that Kingston was president of it. The Bureau also said that as far as they knew, he had only solicited memberships and as yet filled no orders.

While speaking to Phi Delta Theta, McGaughan said, one of the members asked Kingston to name specific places where his company had sent goods. He named Sigma Phi Epsilon at Boston University. McGaughan said he called there and they told him that Kingston had "sent us things that we didn't exactly want."

Kingston showed a sample catalog to fraternity members and told them that similar ones would be sent to them as seasons and clothes styles changed. Thus far, nobody here or elsewhere is known to have received one from the company. Only one model besides Kingston was pictured in the catalog. When at Beta Theta Pi, Kingston denied he was the model, and at Phi Delta Theta he said he was.

Before anyone can solicit fraternity houses, he must first be approved by the University or the Interfraternity Council. One fraternity reported that Kingston showed them a card signed by Assistant to the Dean of Men O. Edward Pollock. Pollock said he signed no such card and has not signed any such permissions for three years. He said he thought Kingston was approved by the IFC but he was not sure just who exactly did sign the approval.

The Better Business Bureau reported to McGaughan that it had been Kingston's practice in some Universities to send a $10 check to the dean of men along with an

MURPHY'S SNACK BAR OPENS TODAY

The menu will feature a daily change of hot luncheons along with a wide selection of delectable fountain treats and cooling beverages.

There are 33 comfortable stools at a spotless all-formica counter. An innovation in this modern snack-bar is the manner in which stainless steel equipment and the very latest in electrical devices enables Murphy's to serve wholesome full course meals in a minimum of time, and with the utmost in convenience and efficiency.

Guests are assured of sanitized eating utensils at Murphy's. Not one, but two modern mechanical dish washers wash and rinse all china, silver and glassware. Each washing receives a complete change of fresh water heated to 180° Fahrenheit, into which sanitizing agents have been added.

One of the main highlights of the new snack-bar is the modern ice-making machine. This device produces uniform cubelets of ice automatically, removing all minerals and impurities in the process. The result—crystal clear ice cubelets that cool beverages faster and last longer.

This restaurant department will be ready for the public on opening day, serving delicious snacks and full course meals at moderate prices.

Ed Council to Sponsor Open Coffee Hour Today

All students and faculty members have been invited to attend a coffee hour sponsored by the Education Student Council from 4 to 5 p.m. today in Dining Room C of the Hetzel Union.

The guest speakers will be Sandy Grotsky and Ruth Johnson, two outstanding seniors in Education who are members of the Student Council.
