Youth Faces Charge Of Prowling

George R. Darbrow, 19, of R. D. 1, Mechanicsburg, was charged by State Police for loitering and prowling at night because of his actions around Atherton Hall Friday night.

Darbrow was apprehended by the Campus patrol while sitting in his automobile at 12:15 a.m. Saturday. Campus police turned him over to borough police when it was discovered he did not have an operator's license. Sgt. Matthew A. Seckinger of the borough police said the license had previously been suspended because of an automobile accident.

State Police reported that Darbrow had tried to enter a door in Atherton after loitering around various parts of the dormitory for most of the night. Complaints by the residents led to his arrest by the campus police.

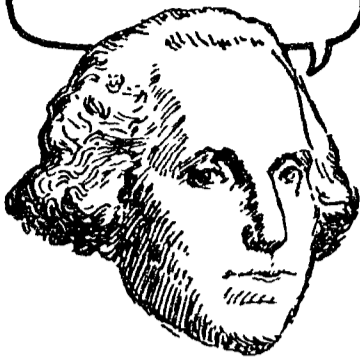

Darbrow told police he was checking on a girl friend who lived in the dormitory. The girl admitted she knew Darbrow but said she didn't know of his presence around State College.

Darbrow had been registered at the State College Hotel. He is being held at Centre County Jail until a hearing is held before County Court sometime this week.

East-West Roadway Studied by Planners

By JIM WHALEN
Last of a Series

University planners are studying the possibility of creating a major east-west roadway to join with College Avenue in giving the central campus a circulating traffic pattern.

The roadway, recommended by the vehicular traffic survey, would be created with the extension of Curtin Road between Recreation Hall and the Nittany Lion Inn to meet Atherton Street.

A clockwise movement of traffic would be created if College Avenue were made one-way west in the future.

The plans for Curtin Road are being studied along with the possibility of closing Pollock Road to vehicular traffic except for emergencies.

The report suggested that Curtin Road, both the existing section and proposed extension, should be designed to provide two 10-foot lanes for traffic.

Complete redesigning of campus roadways is not necessary to ease the traffic situation, since major traffic congestion is limited to four periods not more than 20 minutes each during the day.

The construction of peripheral parking lots and the possibility of staggering the hours of employees would reduce these periodical tie-ups.

In considering the proper road structure for peak campus vehicular traffic, figures were compiled in May 1957 by students with automatic tabulators.

As a result of this vehicle count, plans are under way to have some roads brought into line with width, minimum turn radius and drainage systems associated with modern traffic services.

'Singers' Group Will Present Chamber Music

The Penn State Singers, 25 students who form a collegium musicum or chamber music group at the University, will present a concert at 8:15 tonight in the Hetzel Union assembly room.

Raymond Brown, assistant professor of music and organizer of the group, will direct the program.

Tower music by Johan Pezel will open and close the program. Edwin W. Gamble, Jr., instructor in music, is in charge of the tower music, which will be played by Ronald Dekker, trumpet; Gamble and Robert Yurochko, flugel-horns; Chester Mais, trombone; and Floyd Frisbie, tuba.

Included on the program is Trio Sonata Opus 2, No. 4 by Jean Baptiste Loelliet, played by Marion Berry, flute; Bertha Maraffie, violin; Mary Ann Deischer, cello; and Gamble, virginal.

A cantata, "Command Thine Angel That He Come" by Dietrich Buxtehude and two arias by Bach are featured on the program. Also included are "Crux Fidelis" by King John IV of Portugal; "Sicut Cervus" by Giovanni Pierluigi de Palestrina; and "Welcome, Sweet Pleasure" by Thomas Weelkes.

Associations for the performance of chamber and chamber-orchestra music were organized in various German towns during the first half of the 18th century. Bach was a member of the collegium musicum at Leipzig.

These institutions were usually associated with universities and from this association stemmed the Latin name. Many of them have remained active in the German universities to the present day.
