World Problems To Be Reviewed

Techniques for the reduction of international tensions and other world affairs and policies will be discussed at the Summer Workshop in Education for International Understanding, which will begin Monday and last until Aug. 7.

The workshop is a 6-credit course, International Understanding 400. It may be taken as an elective, or three of the six hours may be counted toward a political science minor.

About 30 to 35 persons are expected to attend the workshop. The prerequisite is six credits in social studies.

A trip will be taken to the United Nations Headquarters in New York City from July 21 to Aug. 1. Each student will prepare a model State Department policy paper on an actual current issue. Lectures will be given by Dr. Kent Forster, professor of European history, and Dr. Rose Cologne, professor of education, from 9:30 a.m. to 12:20 p.m. and 2 p.m. to 4:50 p.m. in 3 White.

Four guest lecturers are also scheduled. N. B. Menon, first secretary of the Indian Embassy, will speak on "The Present Position of the Government of India in the Contemporary World Crisis" at 8 p.m. July 2 in the Hetzel Union Assembly room. Dr. Clyde Kluckhohn, professor of anthropology at Harvard University, will speak on "Human Nature and Conflict as Seen by Anthropologists" at 8 p.m. July 9 in the HUB assembly room.

Dr. Leonard Kenworthy, professor of education at Brooklyn College, will speak on "My Interviews with Leaders of the New Nations" at 8 p.m. July 16 in 121 Sparks. Paul Hoffman, director of the Special Fund of the United Nations, will speak on "A New Offensive on International Tension" at 8 p.m. July 21 in Schwab Auditorium.

Ten French students, in the fields of economics, secondary education, international understanding, law and mining will attend the workshop.

Forster will be the workshop director and Dr. Cologne the coordinator.

Famous Physicist Attends Seminar

Dr. Ragmar Holm, world-famous physicist, was the guest consultant for the Electrical Contacts seminar held last week at the University.

Over 110 engineers, physicists and research scientists are enrolled in the week-long institute being conducted by the Department of Electrical Engineering.

Dr. Holm, who recently celebrated his 80th birthday, spoke at two sessions and serves as consultant during panel discussions. He is presently consultant physicist for Stackpole Carbon Co., St. Marys.

Journalism Institute Cited as 'Benefit'

The majority of the 114 students attending the Third Annual High School Journalism Institute agree that the training they are getting will be of definite benefit to school publications.

The young journalists are chiefly editors and business managers on the publication staffs, and expressed the desire to continue to send staff members for training in future years. Contrary to feeling overworked by the intensive schedule of classes, they request longer sessions, 2-week institutes and the expansion of instruction on year-book production.

Ideas for larger papers, more creative and action photography, new columns and editorial approaches, changes for out-dated school paper practices and many other practical plans for expansion and change were the immediate results of the classes.

"We have always had a lot of good copy but not enough space in which to put it to use, so we are going to try to enlarge The Megaphone and lower the price by soliciting more ads," says Ken Forman of Philadelphia. Solutions for production problems and staff selection were discussed informally by many.

The students represent over 60 Pennsylvania towns, and three out-of-state areas. Many commented on the contrast between high school and college life, especially in supervision and classroom procedure.

Most of them are enjoying their stay: "campus life even for a week is a wonderful experience," commented Margaret Demko, of Punxsutawney. The dormitories attracted much favorable comment.

"They are big enough and very clean," says Barbara Broadhurst of Shillington. Many agreed that the week on campus will be a great help in future adjustment to college life.

Mac Sez... Were you caught?

That's right, fellows, were you caught in that last cloudburst without a raincoat or umbrella? This is absolutely a naturally occurring phenomenon in State College more so than any other borough in the world, or at least it seems so. The answer? Well, we can't stop the rains from coming, but we can prevent you from getting soaked in more than one way (both in humidity and price) with that heavy State College dew. The solution is simple. We have the imported Swiss poplin raincoats with the ENGLISH STAND-UP COLLAR. You'll like the comfortable raglan shoulders, the long center vents, and the slash pockets. These completely waterproof raincoats are available in the popular oyster shade. PRICE! Only $12.95 with EXTRA BUTTONS attached to the inside, just for an emergency. Remember MAC SEZ: When you walk up the hill, the prices go DOWN.
