

NEARLY 3000 STUDENTS enrolled for the mid-session Monday in Recreation Hall. Registration went smoothly except for some of the special-student courses.

2768 Students Enroll For Mid-Session

By NANCY KLING

A total of 2768 students turned out Monday to register for the six-week mid-session.

This enrollment, plus those students already enrolled in the first 6-weeks session, brings the total number of students on campus at present to 4188. The number enrolled in the first 6-weeks sessions, which ends July 17, is 1420.

Exec Program To Be Offered To 40 Persons

The Executive Management Program, a training course designed to widen horizons and deepen understanding of management problems will begin Sunday.

The program is offered to 40 men who have already proven their ability in executive posts and who appear to possess the abilities to advance further.

The program provides an integrated study of essential areas of management, rather than a series of specialized courses. The men return to their sponsoring companies with a broadened point of view and a greater capacity to fulfill managerial responsibilities, according to Dr. Earl P. Strong, director of the program.

Lecturers are drawn from other universities, businesses and the University faculty. Outside speakers, including scholars, businessmen, and government officials, hold afternoon talks and question-and-answer sessions related to the day's discussion.

The program, which costs $1000 for the month, the highest priced one offered by the session, will be held in the Beta Theta Pi fraternity.

Firemens Carnival To Begin Today

The Alpha Fire Company will sponsor its annual Fourth of July Carnival beginning today on S. Allen Street between College and Beaver Avenues.

Main features in the 3-day carnival will be concession stands, game booths and rides for the children.

Saturday will be highlighted by a doll and pet show and the Fourth of July parade at 6 p.m. At midnight, a new car will be awarded.

Dean Yohe Will Resign August 31

By JANET DURSTINE

R. Christine Yohe, assistant to the dean of women in charge of orientation and freshmen, has resigned effective August 31 to become Dean of Women at Juniata College in Huntingdon.

Her successor has not been named.

Miss Yohe will continue to work on her doctoral degree at the University. She will commute from Juniata, which is only 31 miles away. At Juniata, Miss Yohe expects to be one of the advisors to the student government organization.

Miss Yohe received her bachelor of science at the University in February, 1944 and her master's degree in business administration from the Wharton Business School, University of Pennsylvania, in August, 1948.

She came to the University in her present position in September, 1957. During her two years here, she has served as advisor to Leonides Council, Alpha Lambda Delta, freshman women's scholastic honorary society, and the branches of the Women's Student Government Association.

She is a member of the Senate Subcommittee on Social Affairs, the social and recreational advisory committee and the orientation committee.

Ceiga to Give Organ Recital

George E. Ceiga, University organist and associate professor of music, will present an organ recital at 7 p.m. Sunday in Schwab Auditorium.

The program is presented by the School of the Arts and the department of music.

Ceiga will open with Basse et Dessus de Trompette by Louis Clerambault.

The rest of his program will include Gigue Fugue by Dietrich Buxtehude, Fugue Ala Gigue by J. S. Bach, Prelude and Fugue in A Minor by J. S. Bach, Solemn Melody by Walford Davies, Variations on "America" for organ by Charles Ives, Le Banquet Celeste by Oliver Messiaen and Chorale in A minor by Ceasar Franck.

Bill Requests Budget Hike

A bi-partisan bill was introduced in the State Senate Monday requesting a $43.9 million appropriation for the University's 1959-61 biennium.

This was a political move to gain more funds for the University, as Gov. David L. Lawrence recommended a $34.2 appropriation for the University in his budget message.

Gov. Lawrence has repeatedly stated he will not sign any appropriation which was higher than his budget requests unless the tax program is increased. For the past four months, legislators have been haggling over an unacceptable tax program and have yet to take action on the appropriation requests.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Paul L. Wagner (R.-Schuylkill) and Frank W. Ruth (D.-Bucks), was an administrative move to secure funds from the Legislature, according to Sen. Jo Hays (D.-Centre). University spokesmen fully supported the bill.

Hays guessed that the Senate might approve a figure somewhere between the $34 and $44 million requests.

The University's appropriation battle began back in January when President Eric A. Walker first announced the University's request of $43.9 million in a "State of the University" address to faculty and administrative members.

Walker sent his request to Gov. Lawrence and he trimmed the request to $34.2 million, which he sent to the Legislature in the form of his record-breaking budget March 2.

After the bills went to Senate and House Appropriation committee, Walker was called to testify as to the University's need for additional money, above the $34.2 million. He told both committees that University expansion would be curtailed, 5600 new students could not be admitted, and faculty-staff salary raises could not be granted in full if the budget request was cut.

Both committees seemed sympathetic to his plea but the House Appropriation Committee recommended $34.2 million on June 1 and the Senate has yet to make its recommendation.

In 1957, the University received $29.7 million, a $2.5 million increase over the figure proposed by then Gov. George M. Leader. The University had requested nearly $34 million.

Last Rites To Be Held For Davis

Funeral services for Donald W. Davis, professor of journalism and head of the Department of Advertising, will be held at 10 a.m. today at the St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in State College.

Davis died at 8 p.m. Monday in the Lewistown hospital where he had been a patient for the past five weeks. He was 62. He was in ill health since mid-April when he was forced to give-up teaching several advertising courses.

Appointed to the faculty in 1936, Davis for many years taught all of the advertising courses offered by the University and in 1955 when the School of Journalism was organized, was named head of the new department of advertising. Last year, the department led the 46 accredited journalism schools of the nation in the number of junior and senior advertising majors enrolled.

During his nearly 23 years at Penn State, he served as adviser to the Benjamin Franklin chapter of Alpha Delta Sigma, professional advertising fraternity. In

3-Act Farce Rated Top Entertainment

By WILLIAM ALLEN
Collegian Drama Critic

Laughter echoed through Stone Valley Monday night as "Three Men on a Horse" opened at Mateer Playhouse at Standing Stone.

The three-act comedy was most entertaining, humorous and delightful.

No one performance stood out above the rest as Leon B. Stevens, Esther Benson, Ronald Bishop, and in some scenes Ken Evans turned in sterling performances. The excellent directing of Max Fischer was again evident to the opening night crowd.

Stevens played the part of the "hood's" ringleader Patsy and carried the play with his quick wit and excellent portrayal of the part. He was superb in the comic lines and had the audience laughing at his feet.

Esther Benson, who played Mabel, was Patsy's girl who provided the "sex" angle including a burlesque dance of the three-act play. Bishop, who played Mr. Carver, was forceful and expressive in his part as the owner of a greeting card company.

The play centers around Erwin Trobridge, played by Ken Evans, who has the amazing talent of picking the winning horses in the daily races. But he can only pick the winners while riding a bus to work—which for him is composing Mother's Day greetings for Mr. Carver's firm.

One day Erwin becomes disgusted with his work and winds up in a bar where three local "hoods" discover his talent for picking winning parleys and decide Erwin can make them "easy" money. This is fine as long as Erwin is "drunk" but Erwin resists when he becomes sober.

Added to the confusion is Erwin's brother-in-law, Clarence Debins, played by Don Petersen, who also wants to make a fast dollar on the horses, with Erwin as the tipster. Erwin leaves his wife, engages in some strange doings, recites poetic verse, and eventually ends the hysteria by picking a high paying winner.

All this adds up to nothing but the most humorous comedy we have seen in a long while.

Janice Champagne, who plays Audrey Trowbridge, just doesn't look like the wife-type and gives a weak performance in her role as a hysterical wife who can't find her missing husband. Her brother Clarence, has a difficult part but didn't seem to reach the audience Monday night.

Charlie and Frankie, played by Mike G. Matoin and Frank Browning, were excellent in the role of city "hoods". Harry, played by John Kernell, changed his accent midway through the show, but otherwise was sufficient as the bartender.

The play was slow moving in the Trowbridge home scenes but picked up considerably when the action moved to the bar or the Lavillere Hotel room. The staging is effective and the sound effects were most realistic, especially the radio broadcasts.
