Large Audience Fills Schwab For 35th Annual Student Sing

By Nancy Kling

Students, faculty members, townspeople and area residents could be heard gaily singing the refrains of "Harvest Moon" at the 35th annual student sing Monday night.

Over 600 people filled Schwab Auditorium to join the sing which has become an annual tradition during the summer sessions at the University.

Another sing will be held at 8 p.m. Monday in Schwab Auditorium.

The informal song fest was begun in 1924 by Richard W. Grant, former head of the Department of Music. Dr. Hummel H. Fishburn, head of the Department of Music, and Frank Gullo, associate professor of music, direct the programs now throughout the summer. Fishburn has participated in the programs since 1924 and Gullo has been directing the songs since 1942.

"The student sing started in the days when there was no television and not much radio," said Fishburn.

At the sings many types of songs from popular to folk are sung. During the hour-long program there is a small portion of time given to special groups such as soloists and instrumentals. At Monday night's sing, a trio of girls from the State College High School presented special music.

Fishburn said that some people have been attending the sings for as long as twenty years and others have come since the sings were first begun in 1924.

Mrs. Anna Louise Laub, a school teacher from Lewistown, started coming in 1924 and returned each summer until she got her advanced degree in education. She still returns each year to participate in the sings.

Fishburn said that during the war Mrs. Laub saved her gasoline ration stamps so she could buy enough gasoline to travel to State College on Monday evenings.

"The age limit ranges from 5 to 85," said Fishburn, "and a greater part of the audience is made up of graduate students."

At Monday's program, Gullo permitted all those persons who have wished to sing solos to do so. Nearly 20 accepted the challenge and got up on the stage.

The most noted participant to come to a sing was ex-governor George M. Leader who attended (Continued on page twelve)

HUB Features NCAA Gym-- Painting Exhibit

Mid-sessions faculty artists will exhibit their paintings in the Hetzel Union Building gallery.

A reception will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. Sunday in the gallery to enable students, faculty and townspeople to meet the artists represented in the exhibition, which will continue through July 26.

The artists are Hobson Pittman, Chen Chi, Bruce Shobaken, Yar G. Chomicky, Dr. George Pappas, Stuart H. Frost, George Zoretich and Warren Rohrer.

Pittman exhibits three pastels, Chomicky, Chi and Frost are showing watercolors; Dr. Pappas, Rohrer, Shobaken and Zoretich have done oils; and Shobaken is also exhibiting a woodcut.
