

Walters Pleased With 'Wooden-Heads'

By DEXTER HUTCHINS
There is at least one play director on campus who does not mind having his actors referred to as a bunch of wooden-headed-puppets.

This broad-minded director is Walter H. Walters, head of the department of theater arts, and instructor of Theater Arts 443—a class which produces puppet shows.

The students, under Walters' direction, present free puppet shows in the Little Theater, basement of Old Main, every Friday morning during the mid-session. The shows are a part of the students' training in all aspects and problems found in the production of puppet plays. The presentation, which is 35 minutes in length, consists of five short stories each done by three students.

According to Walters, the art of puppetry is becoming important in the modern theater. It also has use in the instruction of grade school children and as an interesting and constructive hobby. Each week the students are given a particular problem to solve in the production of their plays. This week's problem involves the making of the puppets completely from paper.

Groff Grant Renewed By Chinese University

The American Board of Trustees of Lingnan University in Canton, China, has renewed its research grant for another year for cataloguing and preparing for publication the manuscripts and other material of the late G. Weidman Groff.

Groff, who is known to Penn State alumni as "Daddy" Groff, willed manuscripts and other bibliographical material pertaining largely to plant life in Southeast Asia to the University upon his death in 1954.

Dinosaurs ranged from house cat size to monsters 90 feet long weighing forty tons.
