

PHILADELPHIA BRASS ENSEMBLE, six members of the brass section of the Philadelphia Orchestra, will present a concert at 8.30 p.m. Sunday on the south lawn of the Hetzel Union Building. The program is part of the Artists Series summer program and is free to the public.

Philadelphia Brass Ensemble To Present Concert Sunday

BY NANCY KLING

The Philadelphia Brass Ensemble will present the final concert of the Summer Artist series at 8:30 p.m. Sunday in the rear of the Hetzel Union Building.

The ensemble is a newly formed organization made up of six members of the Philadelphia Orchestra's brass section. The group was organized only one season ago and has presented concerts at the Philadelphia Art Alliance and Bryn Mawr College. A series of lectures was also given by the group at Bryn Mawr.

Members of the ensemble include: Gilbert Johnson, Samuel Krauss and Seymour Rosenfeld, trumpet; Mason Jones, horn; Henry C. Smith, III, trombone; and Abe Torchinsky, tuba.

The program will include: "Cozona per Sonare No. 2," "Contrapunctus No. 1" from the "Art of Fugue," "All Breathing Life," "Canon for Two Trumpets," "Largo," "Sound an Alarm," from "Judas Maccabaeus," "Intrada, Sarabande and Bal," "Sonata for Horn, Trumpet and Trombone," "Sharagan and Fugue," "Quartet," and "Miniature Symphony for Brass."

Jones is the head man in the Philadelphia Orchestra's 6-man horn section. He won a scholarship to Curtis Institute of Music and in 1938 at the age of 19, while studying music at the institute he was asked to join the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Rosenfeld attended the Ernest S. Williams School of Music in addition to studying at the New York University.

Smith joined the orchestra in 1955 and became solo trombone in 1957. Although one of the orchestra's youngest members, he is on the faculty of Temple University and the Settlement Music School.

Torchinsky, another Curtis Institute graduate, joined the orchestra in 1949. He has played in radio and opera orchestras and with the National Symphony Orchestra under Hans Kindler.

Krauss is a graduate of Curtis and is a part-time member of the faculty there. He has also taught at the Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore.

Johnson serves as associate solo trumpet with the Orchestra. He took over this position in the 1958-59 season.

In case of rain, the concert will be held in Schwab Auditorium.

Junior College Programs Draw Cross-Discussion

Pennsylvania school officials yesterday heard detailed discussions on a topic that is an important issue in many of their home communities and throughout the State—the community college.

Dr. Elbert K. Fretwell Jr., assistant commissioner for higher education in the State of New York, told 500 Pennsylvania educators attending the annual School Administrators Conference that, in his opinion, the community college should not be placed under the jurisdiction of the local school system.

"A new community college needs to take on an identity of its own from the beginning," he said, disagreeing with a theory advanced earlier by Dr. Robert B. Patrick, professor of education at the University.

Patrick outlined the community college as an "extension of secondary education." He said that good high school teachers are qualified to teach the more advanced subjects offered in the first year or two of college and that in many cases common failities can be utilized. Dr. Hugh S. Brown, professor of higher education, warned that "if a junior college is organized as a glorified high school, it is not a college."

All of the speakers agreed that a careful study of the need for a junior college must be made before such a program is started. They said that a junior or community college must offer programs that will enable students to transfer to 4-year programs at other institutions, although surveys show a small percentage actually transfer.

They cited the vocational program of a junior or community college, especially if it is geared to meet the needs of the particular community, as very essential, and also mentioned as important a general education program, particularly for adults seeking to continue their education.

By teaching skills needed in a community, the junior college can help to meet the unemployment problems many communities face.

All of the speakers agreed that a junior college should not be established to compete with existing facilities.

Two-Year Campuses—

(Continued from page one) and each student is admitted, not to a junior college, but to the Pennsylvania State University."

Walker hit at proposed bills in the State Legislature which have proposed establishing a system of junior colleges operated by the local school districts in cooperation with the State Department of Public Instruction. "The passage of any such legislation would give Pennsylvania four separate 'systems' of state-supported higher education. This would surely give us a record of some sort," he said.

We need, Walker said, to increase the educational opportunity in the Commonwealth in three different areas—2-year associate degree programs, terminal two-year programs at the collegiate level, and continuing adult-education programs. Walker listed the many advantages of community colleges including the lower cost of tuition and other savings made available to the student at the local level.

"There is tremendously urgent need to develop truly effective programs on continuing adult education," Walker said. In large measures, he said, this need derives from the overwhelmingly important fact that we are living in a period of rapid social change.

We must expand the opportunity for a collegiate education in the State by at least 60,000 full-time students by 1970 and we must have both quality and quantity in our instruction, Walker said. "Pennsylvania does need more community colleges—and it needs them badly."

Graduation Dinner

Duffy's will serve dinner for the graduates Aug. 7th until 10:30 p.m. Now you can enjoy delicious home-cooked food in a relaxed atmosphere with your classmates . . . one last fling.

Reservations will be appreciated

Duffy's

In Boalsburg, 4 miles east of State College on Route 322 (turn right at the Texaco Sta.)

Will Speak on Biology

Dr. Julian G. Leach, head of the department of plant pathology, bacteriology and entomology, at West Virginia University, will speak at 4:15 p.m. today in 214 Boucke.

A GREAT Record BUY

Now at the

HARMONY SHOP

"Porgy and Bess"

as sung by

Louis Armstrong & Ella Fitzgerald

List $9.95

For a Limited Time

Only $7.95

"The Most Complete Record Selection in the Area"

The HARMONY SHOP

Frazier at Beaver -- Phone AD 7-2130

Wittany News

- paperbacks for required reading
- the best in pocket literature
- foreign newspapers

WEST COLLEGE AVE. — next to the "Corner Room"

THINKING ABOUT COMMITTING SUICIDE?

Stuff yourself to death with an Italian Submarine from Morrell's. It only takes one — and what a way to go! For a "chaser" you will want to try some pizza, prepared the way you like it. Don't be just dying for real Italian cuisine. Come to

MORRELL'S

112 S. Frazier — Opposite the Centre Daily Times

Repairs	Television
Car Radios	Radios
Phonographs

television service center at State College TV 232 S. Allen St.