

Health Conference To Note Progress

By CHRIS BELL

The "Fabulous Fifties" will draw to a close with perhaps the greatest advancement ever in public health protection, services, and education, at the completion of the Eighth Annual Health Conference to begin Sunday on campus.

At the Conference an expected 900 official and non-governmental health agents, professional medical personnel and representatives of community groups will meet to discuss their accomplishments during the past decade, and to sight objectives which will guide the activities of the future.

Discussions will attempt to analyze the health needs of the people, the best ways of meeting these needs, and providing for the best distribution of services for conquering health problems.

The main purpose of the conference is the in-service training of employees of the State Health Department, and education in recent developments in public health.

Other constituent groups will plan discussions for annual programs, business meetings, committee meetings, and the like accompanying the educational feature.

Social receptions, dances and tours, conferences and meetings, health tests, commercial and scientific exhibits, film previews and staff meetings of the Pennsylvania Department of Health are some of the activities planned by the various health groups which sponsor the Conference.

The first of two general sessions will be held on Monday with John T. Farrell, Jr., M. D., president of the Medical Society of Pennsylvania, presiding. Addresses will be given by Dr. L. Wilbar, Jr., and Dr. G. Brock Chisholm on new concepts in public health.

Dr. William G. Mather, Read of the Department of Sociology, will preside at the second general session on Wednesday which will consist of a panel discussion moderated by Dr. Herman E. Hilleboe, and an address by John Morgan Davis, Lieut., Governor of Pennsylvania.

'Briefhand' Instruction Explained

Shorthand based on longhand is the current subject under discussion at the University where Dr. Theodore Yerain, professor at Oregon State College, is demonstrating the use of "Briefhand" to business teachers, in a short course which ends August 21.

Said to have great possibilities for the recording of dictation or notes, Briefhand is a type of concentrated writing, based on the longhand alphabet, compared to the system of representation by symbols, which has predominated the shorthand picture until now. As a hand-written form, this system can easily be adapted to suit either office work or personal note-taking.

The nine sessions presented by Yerain will cover Briefhand from learning and developing it to teaching it in such steps as the learning of the alphabetic shorthand system, the acquisition of skill development, the taking of dictation directly to the typewriter, the adaption for television instruction, and special teaching procedures.

Yerain is a past president of both the Western Business Education Association and the United Business Education Association, and a member of the national Policies Commission for Business and Economic Education.

Richie Given Military Post

Col. Ellis B. Richie, executive officer in the Inspector General's section, United States Army European Command Headquarters, will assume the duties of professor of military science and tactics Monday.

He succeeds Col. Arthur W. Kogstad who was named to the Penn State post in 1956 and who has been selected to attend the 1959-60 course at the National War College in Washington, D.C.

Colonel Richie is a graduate of Southeastern College and has completed work in educational administration at the University of Chicago and the University of Oklahoma. He is a graduate of the Infantry School; the Command and General Staff College; and Atomic Device School at Sandia Base, N.M.

His assignments have included those of a company commander in the 180th Infantry Regiment and also commander of the Regiment. Among his decorations are the Silver Star and Bronze Star Medal.

German School Tuition Hike-- Invites Prof To Fill Post

(Continued from page one) to be curtailed, much of gap between income and expenses will have to be closed by the University's only alternate source of instructional funds—tuition fees," he wrote.

Room and board charges for students living on campus will not be increased at this time, Walker said.

The new tuition fees apply to graduate as well as undergraduate students. Other adjustments of a minor nature will be incorporated into the schedule of credit hour rates for part-time and special students, Summer Sessions students and continuing education registrants.

The last rise in tuition came in 1956 when the fees were raised from $125 to $175 per semester for State residents.

Papers to Be Presented

Three papers by faculty members and graduate students in the Department of Meteorology will be presented at the Conference on Stratospheric Meteorology to be held by the American Meteorological Society Aug. 31 to Sept. 3 at Minneapolis, Minn.

Dr. Dagobert de Levie, associate professor of German, has been invited to fill a teaching chair at the Pedagogical Academy in Gottingen, Germany, during the Academy's winter semester which begins Nov. 1.

He has been granted a six-month leave of absence from the University starting Sept. 1.

The University professor is the first non-German citizen to receive this appointment. The appointment was made by the Ministry of Culture of Lower Saxony after an invitation had been extended by the director and faculty of the Pedagogical Academy.

De Levie will give one course on American life and letters and will conduct a seminar on intellectual currents underlying Anglo-German literary relations in the 18th century. He also expects to be associated with the English department of the University of Gottingen.

The U.S. Government has asked him to serve as a lecturer at a number of conferences and seminars to be held for Germany under the auspices of the U.S. Information Service.

De Levie, who has conducted research studies in the field of 18th century German intellectual history and literature for many years, will continue research in this area while in Germany. His major study will be of German morals in the 18th century.
