CHECKING THE LEVEL in one of the 23 storage batteries necessary in the operation of the new dial phone system is Harold Snook. Mr. Snook is the PBX (private branch exchange) repairman for the Bell Telephone Company.

New Dial Phone Will Speed Calls

There's a new face on the phone in each residence hall this semester—the University dial exchange is now in operation.

The "inward dialing system" which went into operation this summer can be mastered quickly if students follow these hints:

- Each student has a phone number beginning with the first two letters of the dial exchange (UN) and following with five digits. To complete intra-campus calls, students need only dial the five digits.

- To call a campus number from off-campus it is necessary to dial UN and the five digits.

- Students may receive off-campus calls at any time, but it is impossible to dial an off-campus number from a residence hall phone unless it is a pay-phone.

- Under the new system it is now necessary to use a pay-phone to place any long distance call from the residence halls. It is no longer possible to place a collect long distance call from an individual student phone.

- To call University information, dial "O".

The new system is the fourth of its kind in the United States. Telephone officials point out that the system is ideal for the University since the number of calls received on campus is considerably higher than the number of calls placed on campus.

In addition to speeding service for incoming calls, the new system will improve service by making available an increased number of lines between the campus and the borough.

Upperclass Indies, Frosh Men Automatically Belong to AIM

The first organization established for non-fraternity men at the University was set up as The Penn State Union in 1920.

Today this organization is known as the Association of Independent Men and is usually called simply AIM.

All undergraduate men who have not joined a fraternity and all freshmen are automatically members of AIM.

The purpose of AIM, according to its constitution, is to foster a closer relationship among the independent men, to insure an equal representation in the Student Government Association and to provide social and athletic opportunities for independent men.

The legislative power of AIM is held by the Board of Governors. This board is composed of the president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer of AIM, the four officers of each residence area council, one representative at large for every 500 students in each of the three residence areas and the officers of the Town Council.

AIM, in conjunction with Leonides, the independent women's organization, sponsors a number of social events during the school year. Among the events are the freshman Dink Debut, a homecoming dance and a banquet to honor outstanding independents at the end of the year.

The residence area councils, Nittany, West Halls, and the new North Halls, sponsor various tournaments such as ping pong and softball, among the individual living units in their respective areas. The winners of these events will compete at the end of the year for the AIM Outstanding Living Unit Award.

AIM officers are elected each spring for the following year by all independent men. The individual area councils are elected in the fall. All elections are under the supervision of an AIM Elections Committee.

AIM, under the new Student Government Association constitution established last spring, has been given the responsibility of setting up a judicial system for the on-campus living units.

AIM's new judicial branch will consist of one tribunal for each residence hall area. Each of these tribunals, made up of a chairman and six other members, will hear cases involving individual male students in their respective residence areas.

The members of these tribunals will be appointed by the president of AIM after students interested in serving on the tribunal have submitted an application and been interviewed.

The interviewing committee will include the chairman and senior member of the tribunal to be filled, an adviser from the dean of men's office, the area counselor and the council president.

The members of the new tribunals will be required to have at least a 2.2 All-University average and have a fifth semester standing at the time of appointment. A delegate from the dean of men's office will serve as coordinator of the tribunals and act as an adviser.

The chairmen and senior members of the tribunals will be members of the AIM Judicial Board of Review which will, under the new system, have only jurisdiction over legislation of the Board of Governors and area residence councils.

AIM is affiliated with the National Independent Students' Association whose purpose is to "aid in the full development and adjustment of the independent students." Each year NISA holds a conference for its member schools to exchange views on mutual problems.

AIM holds an encampment each year in which independent men and women participate in various workshops to obtain ideas for projects during the coming year. This year's encampment is scheduled to open Saturday.

University Plays Host To Television Seminar

Representatives of more than 50 colleges and universities using closed circuit educational television met on campus this summer, for a 3-day seminar on "The Role of Production in Televised Instruction."

The program was sponsored by the National Association of Educational Broadcasters. Leslie P. Greenhill, associate director of the Division of Academic Research and Services, was chairman of the closed circuit television committee of the association.
