Khrushchev Talks Peace; Tosses Jab About Missile

WASHINGTON (AP)—Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev came to America yesterday with words of peace and friendship on his lips, and received a polite, restrained, but not entirely unfriendly welcome in the capital of this capitalist land.

Khrushchev tossed a quick propoganda jab about the Soviet Union's moon missile.

President Eisenhower greeted him personally, with a smile and a handclasp. He, too, spoke of the great goal of "a just, universal and enduring peace."

Then the two most powerful figures in the world piled into Eisenhower's open-top auto and rode side by side from Andrews Air Force Base 15 miles into the heart of Washington.

They parted briefly, but soon got together again at the White House for the first of a series of conferences that may have a momentous bearing on the history of mankind.

Khrushchev's arrival, delayed an hour by headwinds, was lacking entirely in major incidents—no tossing of eggs, rocks or insults. A smattering of boos was heard. A few skull and crossbones flags and black armbands were on display.

For the most part, the thousands of people who turned out to see the first Soviet Communist chief of government ever to visit this country obviously did so more out of curiosity than tribute.

Yet many of them did wave and smile back when Khrushchev waved his black homburg hat and grinned jovially.

The chunky Premier was a scene-stealer right from the start at the air base in nearby Maryland and on the drive to the President's guest house, across Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House.

He kept putting his hat on and taking it off, or holding it up to keep the sun from his eyes, all the time Eisenhower was delivering his brief speech of welcome at the airport.

During the motorcade trip into town, the Premier partly blocked the crowd's view of Eisenhower. He rode much of the way with his left arm on top of the back seat, almost around the President's shoulders. On the other side of Eisenhower was Mrs. Khrushchev and a huge spray of red roses.

Right from the start, too, there was a sparing and jockeying for position in the eyes of the world—the beginning of what may be a duel lasting through Khrushchev's entire 13-day stay in the United States.

There was an emphasis on friendship, peace and understanding. But there also was an undercurrent by putting on a skit.

Soviet Boss Greeted By Cool Silence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of Americans in Washington watched in cool silence yesterday as Nikita Khrushchev arrived for his historic visit to the United States.

People for the most part looked at him in curiosity, with apathy, or with blank, brooding expressions impossible to decipher.

Apart from a spatter of applause when he finished speaking, there was no evidence that the crowds lining the streets felt any friendliness toward him.

A cluster of Negro children stood in silence in a schoolyard on the outskirts. At other spots, though, there were loud greetings. On Pennsylvania Ave., the bands played and the guards marched. But on both sides of them, there was silence.

The story at the air base had been different. Khrushchev stepped down from the big Soviet transport wearing his familiar grin.

The Soviet leader warmed up by planting a kiss on the cheek of a 10-year old Ruisan girl who handed him a big bouquet of roses.

"THE RESPONSIBILITY IS NOW UPON YOU," said Prexy Eric A. Walker, at the official convocation held in Recreation Hall Monday. Dr. Walker spoke about the tightening of academic standards at the University.

$10 Million Asked For Expansion

Gov. David L. Lawrence last week requested the State House of Representatives to approve nearly $10 million for the University from the General State Authority.

The proposed $9,823,500 GSA expenditure calls for five projects:

- Expanded facilities for nuclear study and research—$1,272,000.
- Revision and extension of campus utilities—$909,500.
- An addition to Recreation Hall—$2,862,000.
- An addition to the Electrical Engineering Building—$1,070,000.
- Construction of a 4-story arts and human ties building on a site still to be selected—$3,710,000.

In making the request, Lawrence deferred almost $23 million in projects the University told GSA it needed.

Among the projects deferred was conversion of McAllister Hall to an administrative building, erection of a physical sciences building and the second unit of the education and psychology building.

Walker to Support State-Wide Campuses

By JEFF POLLACK

President Eric A. Walker said he would be happy to have the state accept any or all of the Commonwealth Campuses for the community college system.

The State House of Representatives has passed bills calling for the start of the state-wide junior colleges.

Walker said the House had now passed two bills with only minor technicalities differing. However, neither bill contains mention of the University proposal.

Under the House-passed measures, a local school board could found a two-year community college if it can show the ability to finance the project and a need in the area for such services.

Although the University offered the entire 14-campus system to the state, Walker said, if one school board asked the University to use its facilities for a junior college plan, it could do so.

The President has termed the Commonwealth Campus system, "a sound, logical and relatively inexpensive mechanism for meeting the educational crisis the state faces."

First Pep Rally Set for Tomorrow

Freshmen will get their first chance to cheer for the Nittany Lions at the first pep rally of the season 6:45 tomorrow night at Beaver Field.

The football team will also mark a "first" of the season when they play their first game Saturday with Missouri University.

Skull and Bones, senior men's hat society, and Scrolls, senior women's hat society, will sponsor the pep rally.

Freshmen will be taken by their counselors to Beaver Field where they will be lead in cheers for the team by head cheerleader Lanny Dey. Prep Band will supply the music.

Coach Charles "Rip" Engle will be the head speaker. He will also introduce members of the team who will speak to the students.

Hummel Fishburn, professor of music, and Frank Gullo, associate professor of music, will entertain by putting on a skit.

Fall Registration To Begin Today

From 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. today all students whose last names begin with the letters Lan to Sta will go through the long, often confusing line at Recreation Hall to register for fall classes.

Before students can begin the registration process, they complete the following:

- Pay all fees for tuition and residence hall room and board and keep the paid receipt for presentation at registration.
- See their advisor and obtain approval of the classes they wish to schedule. When a suitable class schedule has been arranged, each student will obtain his advisor's signature on the official registration form (card 2) which must be taken into Recreation Hall.
- Fill out completely every form in the registration envelope which they may obtain in the main office of their school or college.

identification cards with them when they enter Recreation Hall. Upperclassmen will have last semester's matriculation card or (in cases where they have lost their matric card temporary matriculation cards which can be obtained in 110 Willard.

Freshmen and transfer students will use the temporary cards they received when they were admitted to the University.

The University requires that students be on time for registration. No exceptions will be made in the alphabetical scheduling.

Instructions to help students begin the process can be found on the front of the registration envelope. Once on the main floor of Recreation Hall, students will find a large chart showing the location of the registration stations for each course. Courses are grouped together under the college or school to which they belong.

Students who find it necessary to make a major change in schedules after they have begun.

Exposition to Explain Campus Activities

Wanna' be a hatman?

According to representatives of the hat societies on campus, in addition to having a good scholastic average and exhibiting leadership qualities, one of the main prerequisites needed in aiming toward a hat is active membership in a number of varied activities.

Students will have the chance to find out what activities are offered on campus and how to join them by attending the Activities Exposition being held from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. tomorrow in the Hetzel Union ballroom.

The exposition, under the sponsorship of Associated Student Activities, will be made up of 19 booths. The booths cover the fields of liberal arts, agriculture, home economics, mineral industries, engineering and architecture, chemistry and physics, business administration, physical education, education, publications, dramatics and forensics, honor societies and service fraternities, student government, independent organizations, musical organizations, religious organizations, athletics, social interest groups and military societies.

Each booth will be staffed with representatives of the activities which come under one of the 19 main headings.

For example: A freshman woman or upperclass independent interested in learning what Leonides does for her and what she can do to become an active Leonides member, can find out at the independent organizations booth. There, she will also meet members of AIM (the Association of Independent Men), TIM (Town Independent Men), AIM Band, Leonides Chorus and the Independent Magazine.

A display that might prove of special interest to men and women alike is the sorority booth sponsored by the Penhellenic Council. Pins from all the sororities on campus will be displayed at this booth.

Varsity cheerleaders will be on hand to explain what they do, how they learn their routines and how to try out for the squad.

Members of scholastic honorary societies from each curriculum will explain the basis on which students are tapped each year for these groups, and thus, they hope, give students something toward which to work.

The activities information which will be used at the exposition was collected and compiled through the dean of men's office by Nancy Clark, SGA secretary-treasurer, and Steven Ott, who are co-chairmen of the program.
