SGA Assembly Approves Student Encampment Report

By CAROL BLAKESLEE

A Student Encampment recommendation to have the Student Government Association President chair the SGA Assembly passed its first test last night when it was approved by the Assembly, 16-5.

For the recommendation to become a constitutional amendment it must be passed by a majority vote of the Assembly for the next two weeks and by a two-thirds vote the following week.

The remaining members of the Assembly, who will take office after the elections Nov. 18 and 19, must also approve the proposal before it becomes a constitutional amendment.

The recommendation was included in a report from the Responsibilities of the New Student Government Association workshop, given by chairman Jesse Janjigian. The report as a whole was adopted unanimously.

The communication factor was one of the main points brought up in the hour-long debate put-

SGA Hears Amendment On Voting

By JIM MORAN

The Student Government Association Assembly heard the first reading of an amendment to the Elections Code of the SGA Bylaws, which would extend voting privileges in the fall elections to sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth semester students.

Proposed by Rules Committee Chairman Peter Luckie, the amendment would change Section 6 of Bylaw 2, adding the new voting privileges for senior elections to those already enjoyed by fifth and sixth semester students.

Luckie said the amendment would grant voting to students who were previously denied votes, even though they were "existing members of the University."

The amendment will receive its second reading at next week's meeting, when it will be voted upon.

Assembly referred to the Reorganization Committee an amendment that provides for:

• Each class to elect a president, vice president, and treasurer.

• Each class to hold one of the seats assigned to his class by Article IV, section 2a, which regulates class representation on Assembly.

• Each vice president to be the president's official alternate assemblyman.

Jack Crosby (C.-Jr.), co-sponsor of the amendment, along with Theodore Haller (C.-Sr.), urged immediate action on the amendment because of the coming fall elections.

Assembly Majority Leader Walter Darran thought that the amendment would make the elections ballots too cumbersome, a major problem of the (Continued on page five)

President David J. McDonald to arrange for the meeting.

Government fact-finders prodded the strike antagonists back into direct negotiations, advising both sides to give some ground.

President Eisenhower's inquiry board wound up four days of hearings on issues behind the 93-day strike by saying the nation sorely wants a settlement.

George W. Taylor, the panel's chairman, said the crippling walk-out, idling some 725,000 workers, is reaching the point where resuming steel production is more important than how it is done.

Taylor suggested that the industry and the striking United Steelworkers of America consider submitting their dispute to arbitration—the decision of an outside neutral—if they couldn't settle it on their own.

Both sides said they don't want arbitration, and prefer negotiations.

As the hearings ended, with the industry's presentation, Steelworkers President David J. McDonald went into a huddle with his union's executive board. The industry's coordinating committee also met.

Late in the day it was announced that R. Conrad Cooper, the steel industry's top negotiator, had called McDonald and arranged the meeting for Friday morning in McDonald's room in the Hotel Carlton here.

Thespian's 'Book' Hilarious Comedy

By DEX HUTCHINS

The Penn State Thespians put a few chapters of their own "in the book" of Mother Goose Nursery Rhymes last night at Schwab Auditorium and came up with a hilarious, close-knit comedy.

"It's in the Book," written by Ivan Ladizinsky and supervised by Raymond Fortunato, satirized everything from "Three Smitten Kittens" to the "Moinsky Ballet" in the fast moving two act "play."

The hodgepodge first act, composed of nine individual skits, was highlighted by a take-off on Little Red Riding Hood, "Riding Hood Like Red," featuring Susan Brown and the dancing chorus. Miss Brown's lively dancing and expressive singing added professional polish to the best dancing scene of the play.

However, in the last chapter of the second act, the "book" began to drag: "The Goldilocks Caper" seemed to have been placed in the "Book" only because there were some jokes left over from the previous scenes which had to be used.

The scenery for the skits showed careful planning and clever art work. The play calls for easily changed scenery but this requirement did not hamper the effectiveness of the sets.

Bert Berdis and Judith Anderson, as the country bumpkin parents of Jack in "Jack Bean Is Stalked," gave two of the best character portrayals of the show.

Gretchen Heim as "Snow Snow White," had a good enough voice to hold her own on the stage without the attempts of Dopey to undress her.

Sandra Hart, "A Woman in a Stew," presented a comically confused picture of the life of the little old woman in the shoe, and presented a surprising solution for the world's growing population problem in her clever "one man" performance.
