

RUB DOWNS AND MESSAGES are part of the therapy treatments of the trainers. Here, Chuck Medlar, head trainer, is working on tackle Stu Barber.

HYDROCOLATOR IS the name for the wet heat treatment being given this player. The trainer applying the treatment is Ray Ulinski.

A FAMILIAR SIGHT to anyone active in athletics is the whirlpool bath. The bath is a combination of heat and rapidly moving water that applies a massage to the affected area. Trainer is Willie Meyers, the players are Stu Barber and Dick Hoak.

EDDIE SULKOWSKI is applying a diathermy treatment to Stu Barber, tackle. The diathermy is a heat treatment that gets right down to the 'base' of the injury.

Trainers Keep Busy All Year

Collegian Photo Feature by Marty Scherr

The Jack Hulme Training Room, a little known place to all but athletes and sportswriters, is located under the West stands of Beaver Field. Head Trainer Chuck Medlar and his staff of three, Eddie Sulkowski, Willie Meyers, and Ray Ulinski, are busy during all of the sport seasons to keep the athletes in good condition.

In the course of a week of the football season they go through more than three miles of adhesive tape as well as many other supplies. Names such as Hydrocolator, Medcolator, Diathermy, and Whirlpool are common there. They are the machines used in the treatments.

Although football season is the busiest for the trainers they are kept active throughout the year. Baseball, basketball, soccer, lacrosse, and tennis comprise much of their work during other seasons.

A SHELF OF 'TRAINING MATERIAL' from which all of the necessary supplies disseminate. Such things as adhesive, and Tuf-skin are kept here.

THE WEIGHTED foot is a method of rehabilitation for injured leg and foot muscles through the use of weights attached to the foot with a special boot.