

Court Asked To Explain Auto Rules

By PHYLLIS PACK

Mordecai Treblow, graduate student in chemistry from Philadelphia, asked the members of Traffic Court last night for an opinion on traffic rules and regulations.

Treblow has received two tickets for parking in Area 30, which is behind Osmond. He pleaded guilty under extenuative circumstances. He believes this area should be made available to the graduate students as they have to work several nights a week in the labs.

Albert E. Diem, vice president of business administration, said last week that if any changes were to be made in the parking regulations, graduate students would be considered first.

In presenting his case to the court, Treblow said he "believes that the present traffic regulations violate the spirit of, if not the substance of, the United States Constitution."

The court decided to postpone its decision on the case until next Monday. Several court members plan to speak to Dean of Men Frank Simes this week concerning the present regulations.

Parading Coeds Decorate Mall At Angel Flight Drill Practice

"A-T-T-E-N-T-I-O-N! About face! Forward march!" Shades of ROTC drill! Don't look now men, but the girls have gotten into the act too.

Every Tuesday night if you are in the vicinity of Schwab Auditorium around 6:30 you can see about 30 members of the Angel Flight drill team parading on the mall.

Angel Flight is a national honorary society connected with the Arnold Air Society. Penn State's chapter was the first founded in the East. Twenty-four colleges and universities can now boast of a chapter on their campus.

Coeds are selected to wear the silver Angel Flight wings through rushing. Following a tea in the spring for all women, each coed who is interested is interviewed by a board composed of an advisor, two members of the Arnold Air Society and two Angels. New pledges are selected on a 15-point system based on poise, personality, interest, and appearance.

Penn State Angels are honored at the Annual Military Ball which is held in December. They also act as hostesses for Arnold Air teas and smokers, and help entertain visiting Air Force dignitaries.

The drill team is one of the most energetic activities of the Angels. Members in their uniforms of "Air Force blue" appear at the Air Force ROTC functions on Armed Forces Day and Mother's Day.

Angels also co-sponsor the Blue Yonder Workshop. This workshop is designed to inform coeds of the protocol, secrecy and tensions involved in each of the various armed services.

READY CASH is the motto of the Student Check Cashing Association. Students have made good use of this new service, cashing over $25,000 worth of checks in the three weeks it has been in operation.

$25,000 in Checks Cashed by SCCA

By CAROL BLAKESLEE

Almost $25,000 has been handed out to students in the last two weeks by an enterprising group of students in the Hetzel Union Building.

For you who are about to run over to get your share—don't, unless you take your checkbook with you.

The "enterprising group" is the Student Check Cashing Agency which operates at the HUB desk on weekends and in the Book Exchange during the week.

Marcus Katzen, sophomore in business administration from Sykesville, said the SCCA cashed a total of 1166 checks worth a total of $15,103.06 in its first two weeks of operation, averaging about $7500 a week. Katzen said this was almost double the $4000 per week they had originally estimated and "business is building up."

The lines for cashing checks are very long, he said, around the 12:30 p.m. opening time and between classes. However, not enough people cashed checks after 5 p.m. to warrant staying open until 5:30, Katzen said. As a result, the new hours will be 12:30 to 5 p.m., he said.

In spite of the large amount of money handled, Katzen said there have been no bad checks passed yet. Checks have ranged in value from 79 cents to $110, he said, although there have been relatively few in the higher brackets.

At present the SCCA is in the third week of a 6-week trial period. At the end of the trial period, Katzen will report to the Student Government Association Assembly on the SCCA's progress.

Katzen said there would probably be no decrease in the rates for cashing checks for a "couple of years."

The cost of cashing a check under $10 is 10 cents. Other rates are: $10.10 to $25.20 costs 20 cents; $25.20 to $50 costs 30 cents; and $50 to $125 costs 40 cents. Checks over $125 are not cashed.

He said the $4000 loaned by the Assembly to start the check cashing agency would have to be paid off first.

"We expect to pay off about $750 in the first year," Katzen said.

During the third week the total brought in was $9195.24. Katzen said the increase was due to banks being closed in Election Day and because of the Junior Prom. The total for the three weeks is $24,298.30.
