

Gen. Engle Plans for Invasion

By SANDY PADWE
Someone got his historical dates mixed up yesterday on Beaver Field. Instead of Pearl Harbor, they re-enacted Valley Forge, complete with frigid blasts, snow and frozen grounds.

Field General Engle, his white hair blending with the snow on the ground, watched intently as his Lieutenants put the troops through some heavy drills.

All of a sudden a young warrior broke from a maze of blue jerseys. It was the leader of the troops, Patrick Henry Botula. "Give me liberty or give me death," he shouted at the top of his lungs.

"You fool," snapped General Engle, "and if we don't get inside we'll all be close to the other."

So with a whoop and a holler, the troops ran to their humble headquarters located within the shelter of war-torn Beaver Field.

General Engle followed the young heroes with his staff officers and they immediately went into conference in the corner of the barracks.

Doc Medlar administered first aid to the wounded with such old-out-dated equipment as diathermy machines.

In the corner of the room, General Engle had his slate and chalk out and was talking over the situation with Colonel Paterno and the rest of his staff.

"I hear they plan to attack soon," he said to Paterno. "Yes, but from where," Paterno replied.

"Pathfinder told me yesterday they will come from Alabama," Engle said. "From Alabama," exclaimed Paterno.

"Yes, Yes. That sly fox Dudley Hale gave them the route. A fellow by the name of Bear Bryant is their leader."

"So they think they can take Philadelphia, do they?" Paterno said. "We'll show them."

"How?" replied Engle. Said Paterno: "I've sent Kerrigan to survey the scene at the tip of South Philadelphia where they plan to attack. He's come back with an ingenious plan for an ambush."

"He says to take some men and station them within the huge fortress at the tip of S. Broad St."

"But who will I send?" said Engle, "I don't know who can do the best job in what position. But I'm sure of Sgt. Lucas and Captain Botula."

"Well, we can experiment with different groups for at least 10 more days before making a final decision," Paterno said. "Excellent Colonel, Excellent Colonel," shouted Engle.

"If we can get a break in the weather we should be able to practice the maneuvers for the historic meeting."

"I also hope that Sgt. Lucas will return soon," Engle said. He's been in New York receiving some medals and honors for his performances in the first ten battles. He made the All-Continental Army team, I think. But he's due back today and can get down to the problems of directing the attack of the first platoon."

Lions' Grid Record

Penn State's all-time football record is 374 wins, 203 defeats, and 35 ties. The 1959 campaign (8-2) was State's 73rd. The first year Penn State played football was 1887.

Cagers Lose to Purdue, DuMars Stars with 23

Just what happens to Penn State's basketball team when Mark DuMars gets some help from his teammates is the big question in coach John Egli's mind.

In a losing cause Saturday night at Purdue, the little magician tallied 23 points even though the Lions dropped their second straight game, 63-54.

DuMars' performance before 8500 in the Purdue Field House lifted his scoring total to 45 in two games, an average of 22.5 points per game.

And therein lies the story of the basketball season thus far—It's all DuMars.

Saturday, DuMars got more help from the front courtmen but captain Wally Colender slipped to four points, 12 below his average.

DuMars managed to keep the Lions in the running for the first few minutes Saturday and then Purdue's Terry Dischinger began to hit from all over and gave the Boilermakers a solid eight point lead which they carried into the halftime intermission.

It was a little different in the second half. DuMars hit regularly and got a little support from Jon

Musser, Paul Sweetland and Gene Harris.

The Lions played Purdue on even terms the rest of the half, but Ray Eddy's boys never lost their halftime lead.

"Overall we played better against Purdue than North Carolina State. Our big boys improved but Wally (Colender) had an off night. With a week's work I think we'll be ready to give West Virginia a battle," Egli said.

The Lions play the top-ranked Mountaineers with All-American Jerry West this weekend in Morgantown.

Egli emphasized that to beat the Mounties it would take an all-out performance by everyone. "Once we get everybody working together, we'll win our share of games," he said.

"One thing is certain though, West Virginia can't be any tougher than those other two clubs we've faced.

"Purdue really had a strong outfit. That Dischinger is some ballplayer. He seemed to do everything right and he's only a sophomore.

"The difference again was their strength of the boards. They were just too big for us."

"Purdue's lineup averaged 6-5 per man while Penn State's was far below that.

Dischinger was the whole show for the Boilermakers with 25 points on 9 field goals and 7 fouls. Guard Bob Mitchell took runnerup honors with 11 points.

Harris, Penn State's highly regarded sophomore center, scored nine points while Musser and Sweetland each had five for the Egli men.
