Committee chairmen of Junior Interfraternity Council standing committees reported on their progress in organizing their groups at a Jr. IFC meeting Monday.

Donald Giangnacova, publicity chairman, announced plans for a series of articles in the Centre Daily Times explaining the functions of the Jr. IFC and its relationship to pledges. The series will include articles on conditions of pledging, functions of the Jr. IFC and purposes of Greek Week.

WRA Starts Organization Discussion

The executive board of the Women's Recreation Association last night launched the much-postponed discussion on reorganization of the entire WRA structure.

The board itself was first on the firing line. As the constitution now stands, this body has the responsibility of coordinating the four main WRA programs. These are sports clubs, intramurals, sports days, weekend and special events programs.

"As the discussion proved, many of the members who sit on the board have overlapping duties in regard to these programs," President Jean Nigh said.

Because many of WRA's activities are seasonal, a board member's responsibility may terminate, and leave her inactive while still sitting on the board.

Among the board's suggestions for revamping the intramural program was the elimination of the position of assistant intramural chairman. Her duties would then be delegated to a board of intramural managers and living unit chairmen.

No suggestions were given final approval by the executive board. All suggestions from this and forthcoming discussions will be referred to the reorganization committee, under the chairmanship of Betsy Ingley.

ICG Makes New Agenda For Spring

An outline of the spring semester program of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government was presented last night by Carl Smith, chairman of the organization.

Smith announced plans for orienting ICG members to convention operation and procedure in preparation for the regional and state ICG conventions to be held in the spring.

He also plans to set up a point system based on attendance and participation in meeting and committee work.

The point system will be used to choose delegates to the coming conventions.

The organization's regional will be held March 20 at Dickinson College, Carlisle. The state convention is scheduled for April 16-18 in Harrisburg.

William Reilly, ICG assistant regional director, reported on a recent regional executive committee meeting.

Smith said he plans to relinquish his chair at various times throughout the spring semester to give members experience in chairmanship.

Nittany Council Backs Clean Up

Nittany Council last night solidly backed the action taken by SGA and various committees working on the Nittany Area improvement plan.

In a discussion period the Council voted complete support of the improvements sought so far for the Nittany Area and promised to back to their fullest all future action pressed by the Nittany Improvement Committee.

In other business the Council decided to renew the Nittany Independent, a Nittany Area newspaper published monthly last year, if an editor can be secured.

May we suggest Mad River Glen in Vermont for those of you addicted to skiing. Returning from 7 days on skis we can testify to the 32" of snow which fell during the last three days of that week. If you be a true gourmet where quantity, quality, atmosphere and reasonable price blissfully intermix, we suggest the Mad River Barn about 5 miles from the ski area. The area is a 10-12 hour ride from here.

December's best parties as photographed in COLOR will be on display today.

Today and tomorrow will be the last days to obtain extra pix of this semester's parties. Many are one of a kind so expect to be disappointed if you be a latecomer.
