State-Wide TV System Planned

This is the second in a series on educational television. Today's article explains the history of the state-wide system.
By NICKI WOLFORD

The Joint Committee on Educational Television became one of the key organizations in the attempt to establish a state system of educational television.

This committee was formed through the efforts of the Educational Television Programs Institute held at the University in 1952.

The headquarters of the committee was established in the Education Building in Harrisburg with Walter Kearney, associate director of the University placement service, as executive secretary.

The various subcommittees went to work on some of the major problems of developing the system. The work of the committees included:

Defining the objectives and functions of educational television.

● Making an analysis of the financial requirements and sources of funds.

● Studying legal and legislative problems.

● Planning the best possible methods for getting maximum cooperation between commercial and non-commercial agencies.

The work of the JCET-Pennsylvania was aimed principally toward the Hershey Conference which was held on Nov. 19 and 20, 1952.

The conference was planned and organized by the JCET-P and delegates from the state's educational institutions, citizens groups, state government offices, business and industry attended it.

Reports from JCET-P committees were heard and discussed by members at the conference.

During the conference, Governor John S. Fine officially appointed an Educational Television Committee which would carry on the work of the ad hoc JCET-P.

The University, largely through the efforts of Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower and Dr. Clarence R. Carpenter, had a very active part in bringing the plans for a state educational television system up to this point.

The Educational Television Committee drew up a plan for a state-wide system linking Pittsburgh, Erie, University Park, Harrisburg and Philadelphia.

However, this plan did not receive any support in Harrisburg. A bill was introduced into the legislature but was turned down for lack of funds.

After Fine went out of office the Committee on Educational Television just dissolved.

SGA Grants $2000 For Joint Series

Two thousand dollars will be given to the new Artists Series Committee next semester to enable it to sponsor lecture programs, SGA President Leonard Julius said yesterday.

The new committee will consist of the present Artists and Lecture Series Committee and will sponsor all programs planned by the present committees with the exception of the Darwinian Series. This series, which was started by the present Lecture Series Committee, will be completed by this group, Julius said.

Chairman of the new group will be Ben Euwema, Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, and the committee for next semester will consist of the present members of the Artist Series plus two members of the present Lecture Series Committee.

Starting next fall six students will sit on the committee, the SGA cultural chairman and four appointed students, Julius said.

The two groups were merged by action of Dr. Eric A. Walker. It was felt that the functions of both committees were interrelated and that one committee could administer programs for both groups with increased efficiency.

It is hoped also that combining the two groups will enable both groups to have sufficient funds to sponsor the programs they would like, Julius added.

A college professor warns: College cheating is an American disgrace!

Why is cheating an accepted practice in many of our colleges today? What can we do to stop this scandalous habit? In this week's Saturday Evening Post, a college professor reports:

- about the ingenious ways students cheat.
- how one college official admits "1 out of 3 students cheats rather regularly."
- why many professors know what's going on — but do nothing to stop it.

Be sure to read the explosive report on our "American Disgrace: College Cheating" — in this week's Post.

GSA Questions Housing Rule

The present campus housing regulation which does not permit children over five years of age to live in campus housing was brought before the Graduate Student Association at their monthly meeting Monday.

It was reported that several families have been given or perhaps will be given eviction notices because of this regulation. The council decided that the executive committee should bring this matter to the attention of Dr. Harold K. Schilling, dean of the Graduate School, at their next meeting.

Among other business, it was decided that the GSA traffic committee investigate the SGA proposal that there be a registration fee for all student cars.

The council also announced that the tentative publishing date of the next GSA newsletter will be Jan. 16, and that the next mixer for graduate students will be held Feb. 12.

AIM, Leonides Will Discuss Indie Merger

By JANET DURSTINE

The Association of Independent Men Board of Governors decided last night to plan a joint meeting with Leonides Council and the four men's area councils to discuss the proposed AIM-Leonides merger.

The suggested date for the meeting is Feb. 11, but it will be subject to approval by the other groups.

The controversial merger was recommended at the Independent Encampment in September and has been discussed by both AIM and Leonides this fall.

In other business, AIM decided to continue sponsoring Club Hubana, the independent's "night club" held in the Heibel Union ballroom, during the spring semester.

Richard Stevko has unofficially resigned from the position of chairman of the Club Hubana committee. Charles Bartholomew, chairman of the committee which established the event, will serve as temporary chairman. He said he would recommend a permanent chairman from his committee.

Michael Woodring reported that he had discussed the printing of an independent newsletter with the Nittany and Commercial printing companies. He said he would discuss the newsletter with other printing companies in State College.

The board cited Stafford Friday, who will graduate in January, for outstanding service as an AIM member.
