

Changes in ROTC Set for Next Fall

By KAY MILLS

Two changes in course requirements for senior Air Force ROTC cadets will become effective next fall, according to Col. Orin H. Rigley, Jr., professor of air science.

Seniors will be required to take political geography 460 for one semester and political science 14 or international understanding 300 for the other. The Air Force will give up three of its four hours a week of instruction to allow its cadets to take these academic courses.

In the remaining hour, navigation and weather will be taught. These courses are given to enable the cadet to pass the written test for his pilot's license.

"We have two reasons for making these changes," Col. Rigley said. "We feel that University professors are more competent to teach these academic subjects."

"Secondly," he said, "over 40 per cent of our cadets are in the Department of Engineering, which is now trying to fit more humanities courses into its students' schedules."

"In order to reduce the overload we have made these three courses acceptable for ROTC credit too. The Department of Engineering will also accept these as electives in addition to the six ROTC credits."

"We are also studying our program to see what other University subject matter may be substituted, especially for the junior advanced ROTC cadets," Col. Rigley said.

"We are considering substituting psychology of leadership, speech and management," he added.

"However, if this is done," Col. Rigley said, "we will have to drop some of our present subjects, which we are reluctant to do."

Nittany Council To Investigate SGA Proposal

Nittany Council last night set up a committee to investigate the University action taken on the housing recommendations proposed by the Student Government Association.

President Barry Rein also announced that an open house for the parents of all Nittany men will be held Sunday, Feb. 14. Letters of invitation will be sent to them in the near future.

In other action Council approved the establishment of a monthly newspaper to be called "The Nittany Independent." Council hopes to make the paper, which will be edited by Gene Male, a bi-monthly publication by the end of next semester.

A committee was set up to plan for the outstanding living unit award dinner to be held in May.

Princeton Defeat Brings 6th Win to Chess Team

The Penn State Chess Team scored a 4-1 win at Princeton University bringing the record for intercollegiate competition to date to six victories and one draw.

The tie match was played with Columbia while the Penn State team defeated Pitt, Carnegie Tech, Georgetown, C.C.N.Y., Princeton, and Army.

In the Princeton match, Cantone, Bickman, Sommerville, and Mathews won while Eckman lost to Randolph.

Orchestra to Present Concert

The University Symphony Orchestra will present its annual Winter Concert at 3 p.m. Sunday in Schwab Auditorium.

The entire program, directed by Theodore K. Karhan, assistant professor of music, is made up of selections that will be presented for the first time in State College.

The program will open with "The High Castle," first of a cycle of tone poems by Bedrich Smetana. It will also include the "Third Symphony" by Jean Sibelius and "Quiet City" by Aaron Copland.

George Frederick Handel's "Concerto for Organ and Chamber Orchestra" will be presented with George Ceiga, University organist as soloist.

This concert is one of the series of complimentary concerts presented by the Department of Music.

The orchestra is composed of 60 members, both graduate and undergraduate students who give about four concerts each year.
