University Orchestra to Present Variety of Musical Selections

The University Symphony Orchestra will culminate five months of practice by presenting a program of pre-classical, romantic and modern music at 3 p.m. tomorrow in Schwab Auditorium.

Theodore Karhan, director of the orchestra, said that all the four pieces to be played are those played by professional symphony orchestras. Two, "The High Castle" by Bedrich Smetana and Symphony No. 3 by Jean Sibelius are particularly difficult, he said.

"The High Castle" is the first in a series of tone poems in which Smetana describes in music a poet's musing on the past glories of Bohemia.

Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" which will also be performed, portrays the attempts of musicians to arouse the conscience of his society. Featured in the piece are solos by the trumpet and english horn.

George Ceiga, University organist, will play the solo part in the orchestras performance of Handel's "Concerto No. 5 in F Major for Organ."

WDFM, student radio station, in cooperation with WMAJ will broadcast the concert in stereophonic sound.
