All Colleges To Require Speech 200

By AMY ROSENTHAL

Speech 200 has been made a requirement in all colleges of the University but no final decision has been made as to when the requirement will take effect.

The requirement will not apply to students already enrolled.

Lester Guest, chairman of the sub-committee of the Senate Committee on Educational Policy, which introduced the plan to the Senate, said the requirement will probably take effect next fall.

The Senate passed the sub-committee plan in June, 1959.

Under this rule those who wish to be exempt from Speech 200 will be given a private hour examination in which they will be given scrambled information and from it will present a five minute speech. Each speech will be judged by speech professors for organization, analysis, adaption and presentation, Dr. Robert Oliver, head of the Department of Speech, said.

The Senate also passed recommendations of the sub-committee that those who cannot pass Speech 200 will be given remedial training in speech until they do pass it. Oliver said advisors have been given the authority to judge their advisees' speech and recommend them to take a remedial speech training course at the Speech and Hearing Clinic, if they need it.

Because of the sub-committee's recommendation, Speech 200 has been evaluated and the course now places more emphasis on being able to speak well in discussions, conversations, and before informal groups.

Oliver said that the experimental evaluation program under the direction of Dr. Paul Holtzman, associate professor of speech, and Robert E. Dunham, instructor in speech, is testing two groups of 100 students to see how the course can be further improved and how much is actually learned in Speech 200.

The Senate Committee on Educational Policy was instructed to study how competence in

Freshmen to Live In Upperclass Halls

By ELAINE MIELE

The integrated housing of freshmen and upperclassmen will help freshmen "grow up a lot faster," Dorothy J. Lipp, dean of women, said yesterday.

Freshman residence halls will be abolished next semester for both men and women students, under a new plan announced last week.

The Freshmen will be divided among all the residence halls. A logical percentage of freshmen and upperclassmen will live in each hall, Dean Lipp said. In this way there will not be a small group of freshmen living in any one hall, she explained.

There are very few schools left where freshmen are separated from upperclassmen, Dean Lipp said. Our present system helps "freshmen to stay freshmen," she said.

"I think that the original idea was to protect freshmen from upperclassmen. Personally, I think that our upperclassmen are pretty fine and can help entering students become good citizens in the college environment," she said.

The present counseling system for new students will remain in effect, Dean Lipp said, but the informal contact with upperclassmen will be added to this.

Other changes in the housing program for next semester will put women students in the North Halls area and graduate students in Grange Hall.

ing low quality students. At the opening session tonight, President Eric A. Walker will make the introduction and Ossian B. MacKenzie, dean of the College of Business Administration, will preside.

At the general session tomorrow afternoon, Dr. William H. Newman of the Graduate School of Business at Columbia University will be the principal speaker.

John T. Ryan Jr., president of the Mine Safety Appliance Co., Pittsburgh, will present the businessmen's point of view at the general session tomorrow night.

Karl R. Bopp, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, will moderate the closing session Saturday morning when reports of the round-table chairmen are made.

Ike Defends U.S. Defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower yesterday pronounced the country's defenses strong, awesome and universally respected. He hotly denounced as despicable any charge that he has misled the people on that score.

Eisenhower announced he will have more to say about national security and will discuss his South American trip which starts next week in a nationwide radio-TV address Sunday night.

What triggered something of a presidential outburst yesterday was word from a newsman that critics charge the administration "has been complacent in advising the people of the danger we face in the world" and that economy may stand in the way of developing new weapons.

The question was whether Eisenhower believes the administration has misled the American people in any way or whether any money has been withheld from any needed weapon. Grating out his words, the chief executive replied.

"If anybody — anybody — believes that I have deliberately misled the American people, I'd like to tell him to his face what I think about him," he said. "His is a charge that I think is despicable, and I have never made it against anyone in the world, and I wouldn't as long — unless he were in a bar of justice somewhere to be tried for something that was intolerable."

From there the President went on to review the history of U.S. defenses since the end of World War II — a period he saw as one of disarming, falling behind in almost every field of development, reversing directions after the Korean War began, and trying to build an adequate deterrent and defensive power.

"This is what I believe we've been trying to do with all our might," Eisenhower said, "and I get tired of saying that defense is to be made an excuse for wasting dollars, I don't believe we should pay one cent for defense more than we have to."

TV Set Reported Stolen From North Hall Dorm

A television set was reported missing from Beam Hall early yesterday morning, according to James Lavin, North Halls coordinator.

The missing set, apparently stolen, was purchased with money donated by the four units in the hall. Lavin said the Campus Patrol is investigating the case.

Pollock Rd. To Close

Pollock Rd. is scheduled to be closed to all thru traffic beginning today. The road will be closed from Fraser Rd. near Willard Hall to the Graduate Hall and Old Main Rd. entrances.

More Snow Predicted For Tonight

By JOEL MYERS

The second heavy snowstorm to fall in this area in less than a week is expected to begin tonight and continue tomorrow.

A storm system that has been located in a threatening position for the past few days began to intensify late yesterday, increasing the chances of snow for this area.

The storm is expected to follow a northeastward path similar to the course taken by the vigorous storm that dumped nine inches of snow during the weekend.

To complicate the weather pattern, a huge mass of cold arctic air is pushing southward across Canada toward this area. This will cause very cold weather for the next several days.

The snow from the approaching storm will be limited to the western two-thirds of Pennsylvania, since temperatures will probably be high enough to cause rain in eastern sections.

The forecast is for mostly cloudy and colder weather today with temperatures hovering in the middle 30's.

Snow is expected to begin tonight and then become moderate to heavy late tonight and tomorrow morning. As much as three to six inches of snow could accumulate by tomorrow afternoon. Winds will be increasing late tonight and should be strong tomorrow.

It will be colder tonight with a low of 25 degrees.

Senior Advisory Board

The Senior Class Advisory Board will meet at 6.30 p.m. tomorrow in 218 Hetzel Union.

The senior class gift will be discussed and pledge money for the gift will be turned in.

Malott to Discuss Business Education

Ways of improving education programs for students entering business will be the subject of a three-day conference which opens tonight at the University with an address by Deane W. Malott, president of Cornell University.

Malott will discuss "Business Education - Challenge of Tomorrow" at the opening plenary session of the Gordon Pierson Reports Conference at 7:15 in the Nittany Lion Inn.

More than 50 educators and business leaders in industry and business are participating in the conference to discuss the direction which education for business should take.

The conference, sponsored by the Ford Foundation, was promoted by the Gordon-Howell and Pierson reports, two independent studies which agreed that drastic reforms must be made to upgrade present business education.

Both studies reported more general education in the business curriculum was necessary and suggested deferring formal business training until the graduate years.

The reports concluded that business schools today are attract-

Spring Week Themes Due March 4

Preliminary choices for themes, skits and games for Spring Week must be turned in to the committee by March 4.

The committee will review the choices and return them to the individual groups with an application form. The form must then be filled out and submitted for final approval.

The committee will attempt to divide the categories evenly so it will be advantageous for groups to get their choices in early, chairman Walter Caplan said.

Groups will be permitted to use tape-recorded voices for their skits, Caplan said, but the use of movies will not be permitted.

This year, as before, winners in the Queen of Hearts and He-Man contest will carry their partners into the finals with them, even though their partners may not have placed. The committee will try to plan some game in which the teams could compete, Caplan said.

The coronation of Miss Penn State will be on Awards Night which will be held in the Hetzel Union ballroom. The program will consist only of the coronation and the awards. A nightclub act will not be engaged and no admission will be charged, he said.

After preliminary points are given to groups in the various events, the winners will be computed by awarding points under an over-all point system. The group which places first in the carnival will get 40 points; the second, 25, and the third, 15.

Thirty points will be given for first place in the float parade, 20 for second place and 10 for third place.

Winners in the Queen of Hearts and He-Man contests will receive 15 points for first place, 11 for second, 8 for third, 5 for fourth and 3 for fifth. Five points will be given to Miss Penn State and three to each of the next four finalists.

In case of rain, the float parade will be held at 12 noon on April 30, and the carnival on May 2.
