

IFCPA Suggests New Food Purchasing Plan

By JIM STROTHMAN

A volume food purchasing plan regulated by the Interfraternity Council Purchasing Association can save member fraternities expenses on 90 per cent of all food items purchased, James Reeves, senior in hotel administration from West Chester and acting president of IFCPA, said recently.

UCA Plans HUB Exhibit On Projects

Opportunities for travel, service and experience in possible vocations will be presented in the Hetzel Union card room all this week.

The exhibit, sponsored by the University Christian Association, will make available information about summer projects arranged by church groups and the council on student travel.

Three projects offering an opportunity to earn money during the summer are in the fields of industry, hospitals and other institutions and the federal government. The students participating in the projects share living expenses for the group.

Several evenings a week are spent with guests who help them analyze the economic and social situation in which they are working.

Other opportunities available for students are found in volunteer work camps which are held all over the world. Students travel to a location in which there is a specific need—a new community building, supervision for a playground, health services. At this place they work with the residents of the host community and learn the problems which that group is facing.

Travel seminars for Europe, Africa and Asia are also being announced.

Participating in the exhibit are the Newman Club, Hillel Foundation and the UCA.

School Speakers Deadline Nears

The deadline for applying to participate in the High School Speakers program during Easter vacation has been set for Saturday.

Applications are available at the Hetzel Union desk.

Through the program, sponsored by the Student Government Association, University students will speak at their high school alma maters during Easter vacation on "the aspects of College Life."

The program will be continued after this semester during all the University vacations.

According to Reeves, meat, canned goods and produce are the three main items concerned in the volume purchasing plan. Bids are sent out from food vendors to the IFCPA stating prices they wish to charge for various items, he said.

A testing program concerned with the quality of foods, prices, service and responsibility is then established and is the final determinant in choosing two vendors for each category.

The program is headed by Louis A. Berrena, director of the Hetzel Union dining room; Edward S. Evers, supervisor of Simmons dining hall; and Wilmer E. Wise, assistant to the dean of men in charge of fraternities.

This board of directors cuts open cans and determines food ratings in terms of "can quality," Reeves said. This year, testing was done in the Home Economics cafeteria under the direction of Ruth L. Godfrey, associate professor of hotel administration, and one of her classes. "The class set up the entire program and helped in many ways," he said.

Vendors chosen this year were: meat, Cold Inc. and Slagle's Market; produce, Dean's Wholesale & Retail; and canned goods, John Haugh & Sons.

According to the plan, any fraternity can join IFCPA, Reeves said. As a member, it will receive all the benefits of the program but it must promise to buy all its goods from the vendors selected.

The IFCPA is located in the HUB. Its board of control consists of six students and seven non-students.

Theater to Present Student Production

The Five O'Clock Theater will present "Demonigratiousus," written by Michael Corrado, sophomore in arts and letters from Altoona, today in the Little Theater in the basement of Old Main.

The play is about a man who thinks he is a poet. He has the ambition to be one but not the ability. Due to faith and this ambition, he receives help from the god Apollo.

William Kotzwinkle, sophomore in the division of counseling from Scranton, will play Demonigratiousus, and David Wilson, junior in psychology from Drexell Hill, will play Apollo.

Michael Forgacs, graduate student in theater arts, is directing the play.

'S' Club Names Watkins

The varsity "S" Club has named Donald Watkins, assistant professor of physical education, their advisor for the remainder of the year.

Students Sentenced By Tribunal

Disciplinary probation and office probation were recommended for two of three student cases brought before Off-Campus Tribunal.

A student apprehended by the Borough police for drunken driving was given disciplinary probation for this semester. The Centre County court gave him a suspended sentence, fined him $100 plus costs and put him on probation for two years. The student, a minor, in a previous incident had been found guilty by the student court for drinking in the residence hall.

Office probation was given John Barth, junior in civil engineering from Scranton, who frightened a young woman on E College Ave. The student court also recommended that Barth write a letter of apology to the woman.

In the third case the tribunal decided to take no action. The case involved a student who alone was apprehended for disorderly conduct which was caused by a group of students. A beer keg had been thrown from Bill's Tavern onto the street. When the police approached the group that had thrown it, the others ran away.

The dean of men's office supported all the recommendations of the Off-Campus Tribunal.

Ulerich to Chair Group

William K. Ulerich, publisher of the Clearfield Progress and an alumnus of Penn State, has been appointed chairman for the 1960 Pennsylvania Newspaper Association Advisory Committee to the School of Journalism. The committee is composed of 16 editors and publishers from throughout Pennsylvania.

Cut System Examined

Rule Change Fails To Affect Students

By NICKI WOLFORD

Under the amended Senate regulation which requires instructors to report students with successive unexplained absences, students "have no privileges that they didn't have before," Dr. Robert G. Bernreuter, special assistant to the President for student affairs, said.

Originally rule K-9 of the Senate Regulations for Undergraduate Students required instructors to report students with three successive absences to the dean of the college who would in turn report the student to the dean of men or dean of women.

The Senate Committee on Rules recommended that this regulation be abolished at Senate meeting in Feb. 11.

However, the Senate rejected the committee's suggestion and amended the regulation by substituting "in any such cases" for three successive unexplained absences.

When asked if this "in any such cases" meant an unlimited cut system, Bernreuter said, "there is no such system." The new regulation is more lenient toward the individual instructor but students have no new privileges, he explained.

When Frank J. Simes, who proposed the amendment, was asked if this meant an unlimited cut system, he said, "I really don't know."

Apparently the committee felt instructors should not be required to take attendance, and this amended regulation is a "compromise," Simes said. He said he wanted instructors to be "aware" of the fact a student is not attending class.

Bernreuter said one reason for the rule was that the University must attest to the federal government that students receiving GI benefits are attending classes.

The University must have some method of keeping track of students who live downtown, so that if they are in trouble or leave the University, the administration will know about it, Bernreuter said.

In asking that the rule be (Continued on page twelve)
