Army Corps Will Select Five Queens

The Army ROTC brigade and each of the four cadet battle groups will soon have queens, Col. Ellis B. Richie, professor of military science and tactics, has announced.

Col Richie said the idea was suggested by a group of advanced course cadets as a means of "improving the esprit de corps of the cadet brigade."

About 25 potential queens have already been nominated. A program of photographs, interviewing and voting will soon be started to select the queens.

Present plans include five queens and five alternates. Selections will be made on the basis of beauty, poise, personality and general suitability as an ROTC queen.

Any Army ROTC cadet may nominate a coed by turning in her name to his ROTC instructor. An application blank will then be mailed to his candidate.

Any coed may nominate herself or a friend by securing an application blank in the ROTC offices in 105 Carnegie. The selection process will continue through March.

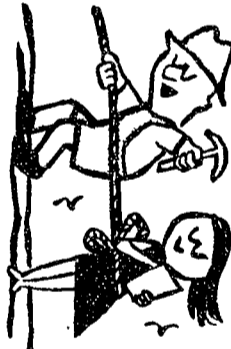

The Army ROTC hopes to select the queens prior to the outdoor drill periods which are scheduled to start at the end of March.

Seventh Snowiest Month

February Snowfall Totals 22.1 Inches

By JOEL MYERS
Collegian Forecaster

February 1960 went into the record books as the seventh snowiest February in history and the snowiest since 1926. The total fall was 22.1 inches.

The entire complexion of the winter was changed in the second week of the month when a major shift occurred in the upper air weather pattern, ending a regime that had persisted through November, December and January. The old setup brought mild temperatures to this area, and at the same time steered the snow-producing storms well north of this area.

The upper air shift made itself felt on the surface almost immediately. A vigorous storm system roared up the East Coast dumping large amounts of snow on most sections of Pennsylvania. The eight and one-half inches that was measured here was nearly twice as much snow as had fallen in the three previous winter months.

Another storm followed an almost identical path just five days later, bringing 10 more inches of snow to this area.

Snow flurries were unusually persistent, especially through the last three weeks. Some snow fell on all of the last 18 days of the month and on 25 of the 29 days.

Arctic air gained control of the weather on the 13th and warm British weather never again returned. In fact, temperatures on 10 of the last 16 days never climbed above freezing.
