'Pyramid Project' Promotes Psych Talks for Students

By LYNN BORDONARO

Three years ago the "pyramid project" was just another experiment at Pine Cottage, but today it is Psychology 100, a required course for all Psychology majors.

The project is named because of the pyramid shape in which it operates—from freshman up to faculty member.

Pyramids are small discussion groups composed of psychology majors at each grade level—freshman, sophomore, junior and senior.

Juniors and seniors are trained and designated as leaders. The groups meet for two hours a week to discuss problems ranging over the whole field of psychology.

These groups of 15 or less give the students a chance to participate and contribute to the discussions. The student learns to accept responsibility, thus preparing him to lead rather than just to follow.

Although a relaxed "chatty" atmosphere is maintained, it is made "academic" by the contents of the program which, while developed by a faculty member, reflect needs expressed by the students.

Dr. Arthur Brayfield, head of the Department of Psychology, plans the Psychology 100 programs with a graduate assistant, Mrs. George Imperial, and a number of carefully selected senior and junior leaders. The present group leaders are: Lyn Clemens, Dan Peterman, Alan Elms, Mary Masters, Joyce Pattison and Tom Clarke.

Artist Series Guest Picks Career at 18

Cesare Siepi, basso of the Metropolitan Opera, who will sing in the Artist Series Concert tomorrow night, did not decide to become a singer until he was 18. At that time, Siepi, who knew only two arias, entered an operatic competition in Florence, Italy and won.

After winning the competition, Siepi was engaged by an opera house in Milan. His career was interrupted by World War II when he fled from German-occupied Italy to Switzerland.

After the war he returned to Milan where he was discovered by Arturo Toscanini in 1948. Toscanini presented him as an orchestral soloist in America.

Siepi remained unknown in the United States until he was called in as a last-minute replacement at the Metropolitan Opera's opening night performance in 1950. He is famous for his portrayal of "Don Giovanni" during the 1958-59 Metropolitan season.

In tomorrow night's program, Siepi will sing three selections by Schubert and three by Tchaikowsky. He will also sing selections by Stradella, Cesti, Perti, Mozart, Franck, Faure, Berlioz and Rossini.

About 70 student tickets and 93 non-student tickets remain for the performance.

Assembly will also consider tonight a recommendation to appoint several students to the Committee on Stone Valley Development. These student members would be a link between the committee and the student body.

Student opinion on the priority of development has been specifically called for by the committee.
