

Shell Used by Siepi In Friday's Concert

By BARB YUNK

Cesare Siepi's concert Friday night in Schwab Auditorium turned into an experiment for the Artist Series Committee and the Milan-born star of the Metropolitan Opera.

Siepi, a basso, performed while standing in a 3-sided shell made of fiber glass and aluminum. Siepi said that he thought the shell good but added that it should be placed a little further upstage.

"The effect is deafening on the artist where it stands now," he said, "but it sounds all right to the audience and that's the important thing."

The shell, which was used in Schwab for this concert, is only the central core of a larger partition which will be used for concerts in Recreation Hall.

The use of the shell was an attempt to improve the acoustics in the two buildings used for Artists Series programs, Schwab and Rec Hall.

Siepi agreed that the shell improved the acoustics, adding that it gave the auditorium "almost living room acoustics."

Mrs. Nina Brown, chairman of the Artists Series Committee, said, "We used the shell for Siepi, although he didn't need it, because his is the only program left this year which is suited to its use."

Siepi termed his audience "responsive" and added, "It was a pleasure to sing to them."

His audience obviously did respond, calling him back to perform three encores in addition to his one and one-half hour program. One of the numbers which drew the most applause was Mephisto's Serenade from "La Damnation de Faust" by Berlioz.

The song occurs in the opera after Mephistopheles has taken Faust to the door of Marguerite's house. After Faust has gone in, Mephistopheles sings this mocking serenade.
