

Political Parties Discuss Platforms

By NICKI WOLFORD

A plank on segregation will be included in Campus party's platform for the spring elections.

Candidates of Campus party definitely decided last night to adopt segregation as an issue and will formally announce the plank and reasons behind it in the next few days, according to John Brandt, party cheque chairman.

"Candidates of Campus party feel that the problem of discrimination involves all Americans such that we, as responsible students, cannot ignore the situation," Brandt said.

Party members decided they would advocate that the Student Government Association support a conference which will discuss the group minority problems at the University of Michigan this semester.

Other issues which will become party planks include the necessity of a regularly scheduled meeting between the SGA president and President Eric A. Walker which would be open to the press.

Another plank will urge that all students be allowed to park on downtown streets from 2 to 6 a.m. on weekends. Brandt explained that the borough could adopt alternate side of the street parking to allow for cleaning and snow removal. Under this system, which is used in large cities, parking is allowed on one side of the street one night and on the opposite side the next night.

Other issues which will go into Campus party's platform include:

- The exemption of active reservists from ROTC.
- A University book store.
- A study of the possibility of allowing students to transfer their matriculation card privileges for athletic events and artist series concerts to others.
- The writing of letters to the attorney general asking that students be classified as having occupations away from home so they qualify under the state law to vote here.

An open, weekly meeting of SGA representatives with students in their classes.

A clarification of which courses can be taken by examination and then a listing of the courses and requirements for the tests.

The party's candidates also elected Barbara Adey, freshman in elementary education from Yeadon, and Robert Clapp, junior in arts and letters from Livingston, N.J., to run for assembly seats.

Miss Adey and Clapp will replace two candidates who dropped out of the running.

University party candidates last night decided on a party plank which would recommend the use of SGA facilities for a student lobby.

In a 3-hour meeting, the candidates discussed and voted on various campus issues to be included in the party platform. Four main planks were passed and three ideas will be advocated by the party, pending investigation.

Other ideas will also be investigated and may be included in the party planks at a later date. It was decided to limit the student lobby to state legislation which would affect the University, such as budget sessions.

The other planks decided on are:

- Transferable activity privileges for all students
- A University archives museum for trophies, documents, records and pictures of events and personalities which have to do with the University.
- Extension of the Lion's Den and Pattee Library hours during the week.

In the discussion on transferable activity privileges it was suggested that a separate book of tickets be given to students for entrance into activities.

In this way, it was felt, a student who did not want to attend an event could easily give his ticket away.

Jack Crosby, candidate for SGA secretary-treasurer, suggested that a floating fund which belongs to the Associated Student Activities could be used for a University museum. The fund totals about $16,000, he said, and it is for no specific purpose.

The extension of the library and Lion's Den hours was approved at the suggestion of several coed candidates. It was (Continued on page two)

Few Flurries, Cold Weather Will Persist

Although Winter 1960 started out slowly, it picked up strength with time until it became so powerful that spring is going to have a difficult time in overcoming it.

The unprecedented cold that has prevailed through this month leaves little doubt that March 1960 will go into the record books as the coldest ever observed in Pennsylvania.

Record breaking cold weather will continue today, tonight and tomorrow and there is some possibility of more snow by tomorrow night.

The light snow that fell yesterday accumulated to two inches boosting the month's total to 20 inches.

Today should be mostly cloudy, windy and cold with a few snow flurries. A high temperature of 28 degrees is expected.

Clear and quite cold weather is predicted for tonight with the mercury sinking to 12 degrees.

Tomorrow will be partly cloudy and cold with rapidly increasing cloudiness late in the day followed by snow at night. Tomorrow's high should be near 32 degrees.

Russia Will Accept Nuclear Controls

GENEVA (AP) — Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Valerian Zorin said yesterday, without spelling out details, that his government will accept international controls over nuclear disarmament.

Zorin suggested to the 10-nation disarmament conference that nuclear disarmament could come either early or late in a phased program for complete abolition of weapons of warfare.

Interest was aroused in the Western delegations by the unexpected flexibility the Soviet Union appears to be following in its approach to the nuclear problem.

Western delegation sources offered various theories as to why Zorin was following this track.

The most generally accepted one was that Zorin was trying to get his government's program for total disarmament within four years accepted as the basis for negotiations rather than the 3-stage Western plan which mentions no time limit.

The five Western powers — the United States, Britain, France, Italy and Canada — would find it difficult to make radical shifts in their own program. The briefs of their delegations are closely tied to expert military advice. There is a difference of approach, however, in the Western camp. It was spotlighted in a (Continued on page three)

Gas Leak Repaired In Nittany Dormitory

A gas leak in the lobby of Nittany 32, which was reported by Robert Lynn counselor of the residence hall at 10:45 Monday night, was repaired at 2:30 a.m. Tuesday morning, according to Barry Rein, president of the Nittany Council.

The leak, which was checked by Jerome Whalen, residence hall coordinator for the area, Rein and two other counselors, was reported to the physical plant. Whalen was then told to call Edward Sarson, maintenance supervisor.

Liquor Board Apprehends 36

At least 36 youths, most of them University students, have been caught in establishments serving alcoholic beverages during the past few days.

A check of LaGalleria Restaurant on E. Beaver Ave. by the State Liquor Control Board and the Borough police last Friday evening resulted in the apprehension of 35 minors.

The youths were violating a state law which prohibits persons under 21 years of age from being in an establishment that serves alcoholic beverages unless accompanied by a parent.

The Borough police refused to reveal the names of the violators, but indicated that their hearings would be forthcoming in a day or two.

The University has not indicated (Continued on page eight)

Sarson told Whalen that he would call a plumber. Ten minutes later, he called Whalen back and said that he could not get a plumber and directed Whalen to recheck the leak. He also stated that it seemed impossible for gas to be leaking from that particular closet, Rein said.

The leak was again verified by Rein and Whalen. Lynn, the counselor for Nittany 32 was suffering from a headache, burning eyes, and nausea. Other students in the hall were also reported suffering from similar discomfort.

Whalen then called the campus patrol office, who checked and verified the situation. (Continued on page eight)

New System Going 'Smoothly'—Lipp

By AMY ROSENTHAL

Dorothy J. Lipp, dean of women, said yesterday that the new women's rules are taking effect smoothly except for hitches caused by misunderstanding on the part of staff or students.

She said that women who wish to suggest changes in the rules or who want to know more about them should talk to their WSGA representatives.

When asked about her reaction to the comments on the sign-out system, she said that WSGA is considering other systems to avoid sign-in crowding.

Four WSGA members will investigate sign-out systems and other problems at the Intercollegiate Women's Student Conference at Kent State College this week.

One of the systems being considered is a cardex system in which each girl would have her own card hanging in a file suspended from the wall. If a girl wanted to sign out all she would have to do is turn the card over. However this system is expensive, Dean Lipp said.

In answer to the complaints against signing out at 8 p.m., Dean Lipp said that if a woman knows she is going to be out at night she can sign out at any time during the day.

She also said that women may sign in and stay in the residence hall with their dates until the deadline hour of 10:30 p.m., 11:30 p.m. or 1 a.m.

It is up to each girl, she said, to see that her date leaves at the right time and a girl who has problems making her date leave on time will be asked to explain her actions before WSGA Judicial Board.

Permissions to visit a man's apartment do not have to be given by the hostess, if a girl receives special permission from her parents, Dean Lipp said. She said parents permission slips have only to be brought to the attention of the dean of women's office.

The $1 deposit for overnights in other residence halls is a rule of the Department of Housing which has not been enforced until this time, Dean Lipp explained.

Jessie Janjigian, president of WSGA Senate, said that the Senate Housing Committee would talk to the housing department about the rule.
